Grand Descriptive Powers-

The Martyrs have tayed at home all summer, and their triends, Theophilust Borer and his wife, came over Sunday evening to tell about their delightful summer trip. "Oh, you ought to have been with us. It was grand. Up in the Adirondaeks; they were just grand. The grandest mountains. And the sunsets—ah, they were grand. One evening we mountains. And the sunsets—ah, they were grand. One evening we saw the grandest sunset; ch, it was grand! Just grand. Oh, but the scenery—grand? Perfectly grand! Talk about grandeur; I never saw anything so grand. The grandest mountains; grand! Grand. One afternoon a storm came up, our winafternoon a storm came up, our win-dows looked right out on the storm. dows looked right out on the storm. It was grand. The grandest sight I ever saw. Our windows looked right out on the lake. You never saw anything so grand. And the mountains—ah, they were grand. Our windows looked right out on the mountains; my, but everything was grand, Why, you could just sit in our windows and look right out on the mountains. Ah. right out on the mountains. Ah, they were grand. We'd just sit there and look out; it was grand. You can't realize how grand it was unless you saw it. It was just grand. You can't begin to describe it; you can't de-scribe it at all." At this point the dying Martyrs rouse themselves to assent to this proposition with such unexpected and emphatic indorsement that the Borers are encouraged to believe it is an honest encore, and they "describe" it all over again. During the summer and winter-and in the springtime and along through the autumn months—there is a great deal said and written in denunciation of "descriptive writing," but the fact is we don't have enough of it. There is very little of it. There isn't one descriptive letter in 300 that de-scribes anything. There isn't one person in a thousand, home returning from mountain and seashore, who can give any better description of what they have seen than your friends the Borers.—Burdette. Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

There are no Happy Days.

For those who continue to rise unrefreshed after nights of unrest. Nervousness, insomina indigestion—these constitute a triple alliance that perpetually wars against man's comfort, and robs both brain and body of tranquility. Combat the trio for a time with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and it will give ground and eventually fly the field. The basis of reform is the rectification of digestion, for the brain and nerve trouble is simply a refex of the disturbance of that all important function. A wineglassful before each meal of the national stomachic insures facile digestion, and a repetition of the pleasant dose before retiring promotes nerve and muscle invigorating sleep. Associated with indigestion we usually find billousness and constipation. But together or independent of each other, these maladies are subjected by the Bitters, which also remedies kidney trouble, rheumatism, neuralgia and malaria. There Are no Happy Days.
