

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1890.

OHIO has 40,373 white voters unable to write; Pennsylvania, 65,985; New York, 76,746. The men who cannot read their ballots hold the balance of political power in these important states.

It isn't every office-seeker who is as patient as the man who writes to governor Nicholls of Louisiana, asking that he might be appointed justice of the peace when the present incumbent dies.

It appears from an official report by the United States consul at Ottawa that during the year 1888 the dominion of Canada sent to the United States merchandise valued at $42,572,065, and imported from this country goods to the value of $48,481,848.

The old pioneers who chalked in black crayons upon their wagon covers, "to Pike's Peak or bust," never dreamed of seeing a wagon road built to its very top; but it has been done. The road is sixteen miles long. At one point, which is 10,852 feet high, the smoke of a locomotive ninety miles away may be seen.

The flag of the nation ought to float on every schoolhouse every day in the year when school is in session. The daily sight of the flag means a daily lesson in patriotism. Object lessons have more influence with grown-up children than we think, and with school children at a plastic age their importance is simply incalculable.

A DISPATCH from Ottawa states that the Canadian government has signified its willingness to open the Canadian coasting trade to vessels of the United States at any time that the American coasting trade is opened to the vessels of Canada. This is about the coolest proposition of the season. Most anybody would be willing to swap a nickel for a $5 gold piece.

EUROPE is deterred from the great war, for which so much preparation has been made, by a feeling that the result no matter who wins, will be the destruction of the old order of things, the imposition of huge indemnities, and the genesis of political problems more formidable than any that now exists. For the victors, as for the vanquished, there would be, it is feared, an infinite brood of evils.

A FREE trade newspaper, in order to show the evils of protection, says that a suit of clothes can be bought in Ireland for $6.56. Notwithstanding this fact, it is a fact, during the year ending June 30, 1888, 78,288 natives of Ireland emigrated to this country, but no natives of this country emigrated to Ireland. This shows that a country where you can buy a suit of clothes for $6.56 is not a good country to live in.

FINDLAY, Ohio, is cited as an illustration of what the incipient development of natural gas has done for the localities that have been able to use it. Findlay has in less than three years grown from a population of 5,000 to 25,000, and there are thirty-five factories there, against two before the gas was introduced. The reason is found in the fact that enough natural gas to run a glass factory of thirty-three pots can be had at a cost of 35 cents a day. Other towns have enjoyed similar prosperity.

THERE is a secret society in Baltimore, Md., the object of which is to protect its members from unfortunate marriages. When one of the club feels that he is falling in love, he confesses to his fellow-members and they appoint a committee to investigate the matter and advise him therein. In a certain sense the institution is a trust in hearts, but its object is higher than that of most monopolies. It strives to reduce the unhappiness of the world to a minimum, and has been fairly successful in its restricted field. The sad news comes, however, that all the members of the organization are in love with the same girl.

A CONVENTION, having for its object the securing of improved navigation on the Ohio, the Mississippi and the Missouri rivers, has been held lately at Cincinnati. In general terms the resolutions adopted by the convention call upon the general government to so improve those rivers and their tributaries as to secure to the people easy and safe navigation, as well as cheap transportation. The convention called upon congress to protect these waterways, for the reason that "the competition offered is the only guarantee of the people against excessive rates," and asks that where private individuals or corporations have assumed or secured, by state action or otherwise, privileges on such waterways to the injury of commerce, such obstructions be removed.

DECEPTIVE ADVERTISING.

W. H. Mills addressed the California Editors' Convention at Sacramento, on the relation of the newspaper to the public. He paid his respect to the various advertising schemes which are worked in every place in the country, and in which enough money is thrown away to build up good papers and force the community onward. If there is anything which the average merchant doesn't know, said Mr. Mills, it is how to advertise. You will see their cards stuck up on maps and directories which few people look at, at an expense that would keep their business before the readers of the daily papers for months. The promoters of a book got out by the Denver & Rio Grande made $6,000 out of it, and in a few months not a copy could be found. The First National Bank of San Francisco, got out a picture of its building to be sent to its correspondents, and for a four inch card on the margin $100 was charged. A couple of hundred of the sheets were issued and hung up in places where few people will ever see them, and yet all the space doubtless were taken by merchants who wouldn't put a line in a newspaper. Look out for the foreign paper that comes into your town to get up a special edition, and which will make more profit out of an issue than a country paper can earn in a year. Be aware of the occasional sheet that gives you an affidavit of the job printer as to the copies printed, for most of them are probably left in the cellar. It is not copies printed, but copies circulated and read that makes an advertisement valuable. Yet merchants rarely consider this. The railroad company some years ago assisted in a financial way the issuance of 15,000 copies (printer's affidavit) of a pamphlet showing the resources of a certain county. Lately 12,000 copies of this pamphlet were found in an old lot and offered to the company for about a cent a pound. All the advertisers who had counted on drawing business through their cards in this pamphlet were blissfully ignorant of the fact that they had simply enriched a sharper.

The Behring Sea Dispute.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Lord Salisbury has instructed Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister at Washington, to consult the convenience of secretary of state Blaine in reference to the discussion of the Behring sea dispute. Negotiations are to proceed quietly and continuously and inquiry is to be carefully pursued into the question of Canadian compensation for the seizure of vessels belonging to Canada in the waters in contention. No immediate pressure, however, is to be exercised upon the government at Washington with regard to settling the international question involved and nothing like a formal demand for a speedy conclusion of the affair is to be allowed. The line of action, which has been decided upon by Lord Salisbury, is based on his expectation that secretary Blaine, who is just now hampered by the lease of the Alaska Sealing and Fishing company, will be more ready to accept what England regards as a just settlement of the dispute upon the approaching expiration of the company's lease. When that occurs it is expected that the British government will push the negotiations with a little more energy.

HE TOOK THE WRONG MEDICINE.

Robert Stewart, of Petaluma, recently had a queer experience. He writes: "Carbuncles and boils afflicted my face and neck for weeks. Finally I procured a bottle of one of the leading sarsaparillas. To my surprise it made matters worse. This made me lose faith in sarsaparillas, but seeing a statement that Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla dried up boils and face eruptions instead of forcing more out at the potash sarsaparillas, I bought a bottle. The effect was astonishing. The carbuncles and boils began to dry up, and in two weeks my face was well and smooth as ever. My brother also took a bottle with the same benefit. ROBERT STEWART, Petaluma, Cal."

[Explanatory Note—The mineral iodide of potash, which is the basis of nearly all other sarsaparillas, attacks the blood direct, hence forces impurities through the skin, creating more boils and pimples. Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla acts oppositely. Its vegetable alteratives stimulate the various secretory organs and thus eliminate all impurities through the natural channels, hence dries up pimples and skin eruptions at once. The above testimonial is a case in point.]

The Fish Eggs Were Boiled.

The fish commissioners have been anxious to make a display of salmon eggs, in process of hatching, at the fair, and a few days since, a water pipe having been fixed for the purpose, commissioner Reed brought down a McDonald jar and a few thousand eggs, and soon had the water running into the jar, and the big pink eggs moving around in great shape. Sometime after, on going to look at the eggs to see how they were getting along, Mr. Reed was astonished to see that they were all dead. Accidently placing his hand on the water pipe, he was surprised to find that it was quite hot. Further investigation showed that the water from the boiler in the restaurant had been blown into the pipe, and that the eggs in the jar had been literally boiled. Thus were some three or four thousand salmon cooked at one fell swoop. Before another batch of eggs is put in there will be a change in the plumbing connected with it.—Oregonian.
