Ask For Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier. With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any other. The fore-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far exceed those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples."—There is nothing so good for the youthful blood as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Cahoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

WASHINGTON'S LIEUT. GOVERNOR

How He Got the Position in Nevada.

A Man Who Played Himself Into Office.

Chas. Laughton was elected lieutenant-governor of the new state of Washington on the 1st inst. He had already been lieutenant-governor of the state of Nevada. In 1882, Charles Laughton was nominated for lieutenant-governor by the Reno, Nevada, state Republican convention. Laughton was a young man without any special experience in the affairs of state, and the point was made that he lacked the age and gravity. It was predicted that he would be beaten. He immediately went to work on his own hook, and made his campaign after the most original methods.

Charley was a phenomenal violinist, and could do more tricks on the fiddle than anybody else in the diggins, and putting his fiddle under his arm started off one morning, telling his wife he wouldn't be back until he was certain he had cleared up his fight.

Not much more was heard of Laughton for some time. He did not hunt the beaten paths frequented by the campaigners, but took the little logging and mining camps. He would scatter a few handbills announcing that he would speak at the red school house from 8 to 9 and play the fiddle for the girls to dance from 10 to 12, admission free.

This sort of announcement always drew a crowd, and Charley would open his speech something like this: Ladies and Gentlemen: About a week ago I ascertained that the regular campaign speakers of both parties, as well as the candidates, had decided to give this place the go by, because it was a small place and a few miles off the regular highway of campaign.

My Chairman, no place is small in my eyes where the hearts of its people beat in sympathy for the prosperity and advancement of Nevada, where woman reaches her loveliest perfection, [Applause] where men are natural born thoroughbreds [cheers], and where every intelligent voter deposits his ballot on election day for the safety of the battle born state [cheers] and the regular Republican ticket. [Tumultuous applause.]

Charlie was a graceful talker, and he soon had his audience. He knew when to talk and when to quit, and never bored his crowd, so that when 9 o'clock came and he laid aside campaign talk and began to tune his violin, no one wanted to leave.

He would tell the boys to clear away the benches, and while they were going so he he was giving his audience the melting strains of "The Ventriloquist" in a style that they had seldom heard before, every sweep of his bow, as the boys used to say, "hit them where they lived."

By the time the floor was cleared the audience knew that the man at the bow was no "slouch" and when the strains of the Miserere died away and the applause that followed it, he would call out:

"Partners for the basket quadrille," and in a few moments more he would be fiddling a merry tune, while the floor below him was all action and safety. Above the shuffle of the feet and the lively jump of the music, his voice would sound clear and loud: "Side couples forward." "Gent's circle to the left," etc., etc., until midnight. Then the boys and girls would beg him to run the dance "one hour more."

"Do you guarantee me a Republican majority in this town?" he would ask, as he tuned the E string.

"We'll carry 'er for you two to one," would be the response, and the dance would go on until about daylight.

He went into every Democratic camp in the state with his fiddle and conquered Republicanism with music.

"The Democratic party has no guts than brains," he said one day to the writer, and then tapping the catgut, significantly added: "I'll fight fire with fire."

He wound up in the big towns on the eve of election, laid aside his fiddle, made a few good speeches and was elected by a handsome majority, but not so big a one as he got across the river on the 1st of this month.

Like That Life.

There is upon the Yakima reservation a family of half breeds known as the Olneys. A romance is associated with the name. The white father of the Olneys died recently, but to the last he shunned his own race. In some respects he was like Sam Houston, but, unlike Sam Houston, he never repented of his self-banishment among the Indians. He was of a highly respectable Rhode Island family, and a graduate of Yale college. About the time he completed his studies the discovery of gold in California occurred. Olney joined the Argonauts of '49 and came west to seek his fortune. He left behind him a sweetheart to whom he was to be married as soon as he found the fortune and returned. The girl grew weary of waiting, as many another of her sex has done. About a year after reaching the coast Olney received a letter announcing the marriage of his betrothed. He never got over the blow. Drifting about for a time he located in Oregon, and was made sheriff of a county. In those days there was usually excitement enough in the duties of sheriff to banish the memory of the past. But after a while Olney got tired of hunting down criminals. He gave up his office, crossed the Columbia river, and became a member of the Yakima tribe. His adoption was in good faith on his part, for he took an Indian wife and raised a family. As his children grew up he educated them with care, and when he died he left them well provided for. The Olneys are influential in the tribe, and they exercise that influence for good. But they have no thought of leaving the reservation. They seem to have inherited from their father his disinclination for white society.

Heart Disease.

Heart disease is developed by modern civilization, and is increasing to an alarming extent. Let him who suspects the existence of this cause of sudden death take Dr. E. C. Holden's "Heart Disease," which will be sent on application by Mack Drug Co., N. Y.

A Question Decided.

If a man decides to be on the safe side these days he must be very careful of the questions he asks. The other morning a board of trade men offered a friend this proposition: If a man who was born of French parents in England thirty-five years ago dies in America, what is he? The friend argued that he was certainly a Frenchman. The bystanders who were drawn into the heated discussion that followed declared that he was an Englishman. Several offers to bet on the point were made. Finally the board of trade man's friend put up $5 to back his French opinion against $5 put up on the English opinion. Both parties agreed to leave it to the board of trade man. They asked: "What was he?" And the board of trade man answered: "A corpse, you suckers—he died." Then every one stepped up to the bar.

To old persons and those who fear to derange their stomachs Simons' Liver Regulator presents itself as a most admirable remedy. Owing to its mild action it can be taken by the weak and debilitated at all times and under any circumstances with perfect safety. One of the most venerable of the U. S. Senate, the late A. H. Stephens, of Ga., said "Simons' Liver Regulator is mild and suits me better than more active remedies."

In Fayette county, W. Va., Bill Turner was hired to kill Charles West, and, on the commission of the crime, his employers organized a mob and lynched Turner. This has just come to light, and more lynchings are probable, as the community is much excited over the affair. Prominent citizens are implicated, three of whom have already fled from their homes.

Do not allow the accumulation of Scurf or Dandruff, when it can be easily prevented by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor.

A local brass band plays all day long in a room at the Edison laboratory, in West Orange, N. J., for a phonograph, and large numbers of duplicate cylinders containing the melody are made and shipped to the Paris exhibition. The manufacture and shipment of the cylinders will continue so long as the exhibition remains open.
