The electric lights vied with the cloud obscured sun on night yesterday, and when he retired blushing in the west, they got away the best of the moon and made good light in the lower part of town all night.

Tacoma has recently purchased a steam street roller weighing over eleven tons. It is used in packing and leveling the streets when improved or newly graded preparatory to macadamizing or paving.

Sunday afternoon, while Adolph Johnson was at work on the roof of his house on the roadway, he fell to the ground a distance of twenty-five feet, hurting one of his legs and arms, but not seriously. It was a narrow escape.

Yesterday afternoon chief engineer Stockton found that the bell tower had settled over 3 inches on the south side, through the rotting of the 12x12 upright posts. The chief says it is not fixed right away the tower is liable to fall.

Yesterday afternoon a man named Paul Nelson, working for the government at Fort Stevens fell from a brush car onto the dock a distance of ten feet, spraining his left ankle very badly. He was brought up on the Mendell for medical treatment.

In a letter from Rev. Mr. Short, dated September 29, he expected to arrive in New York that evening at 7.30. He writes that his wife and himself were well and enjoying the trip very much. They wish to be kindly remembered to all their friends.

The Oregonian says that the "cow-boy tournament" in that city last Sunday was "a fake," whatever that may be. It has a long article and uses every word usual, "vaquero," and all, except one important term, viz: "riata," which is omitted. Probably the vaqueros didn't have any riatas.

In Oregon there are reported 242 saw mills, 31 shingle mills, 152 planing mills, of which 29 are classed as sash and door factories, and 10 as box factories. Seven logging railroads are in operation, 14 dry kiln plants, and one mill has a band saw. There are 19 wholesale dealers and 25 retailers reported.

The work of tracklaying on the line of Astoria and South Coast railroad goes right on. Our correspondent at the front telephones that on Saturday nine hundred feet of track were laid, and up to noon yesterday 750 feet more; they were then in the middle of John Matier's place. Yesterday 40 piles were driven on the Young's river bridge.

Yesterday morning a waiter named Henry Wrotan left the Parker house restaurant taking with him the night's receipts amounting to between seven and ten dollars. Last evening the proprietor, Mr. Stone, was bewailing the loss of the money, when who should walk into the restaurant but the said Wrotan: after being accused of taking the money he said the cook told him he would never get his money, so he helped himself.

Jesse D. Carr, of San Francisco, who has 46,000 acres of government land in southeastern Oregon and northeastern California fenced, in violation of law, was in Portland a few days ago, and, on hearing that a certain government agent, who had been annoying him, had been removed, Jesse exclaimed: "Now I am solid!" Jesse knows a thing or two, if he is a Democrat, and it don't make much difference to him whether the Democrats or Republicans are on top, for Jesse will do about as he pleases anyway.

Tom Merry is at present editor of the Missoula Daily Gazette, and the following from his pen is taken from the issue of September 21st: Hon. Sol. Hirsch, minister to Turkey, is lying sick in Portland with brain fever. In his delirious moments he calls Astoria "Byzantium" and Albina "Scutari." He applies the name of "Galata" to Couch precinct, and calls the Willamette river the "Golden Horn." He occasionally has lucid moments, during which he points to Joe Simon and says, "Ah, there is the boss for us." (Bosphorus.) Mr. Hirsch has our heartfelt wishes for his speedy recovery.

At a meeting of the Astoria chamber of commerce last evening, M. C. Crosby, G. Wingate, J. W. Welch, J. O. Hanthorn and J. F. Halloran were appointed delegates to the fifth annual session of the Columbia waterway association at Portland next Thursday. A communication from Capt. John Babbidge, master of the steamer City of Astoria, was read, calling attention to the snags in Prairie channel and Westport slough. On motion the president was authorized to communicate with the proper authorities regarding the matter. Inquiry regarding Astoria, etc., was referred to J. H. D. Gray, and the meeting adjourned.

Sunday morning a middle aged man went into the store of Herman Wise and made some purchases amounting to $4.50, taking the money all in silver out of an envelope and throwing the envelope on the counter, and the clerk, Mr. Howell had occasion to dust the counter and dusted the envelope on to the floor, noting something in it he picked it up and found a certificate of deposit for $500 on the Portland National bank, signed by one B. McElliott. Search has been made for the owner, but nothing has been heard from him so far.

Miss Ella M. Smith, the daughter of the late Captain Benjamin F. Smith, died in Portland on the 1st inst. Miss Smith was one of the wealthiest single ladies in Oregon and was ever ready to assist the needy. Among her bequests is $50,000 to the Unitarian church, among the congregation of which she was a most active and beloved member; $30,000 to the Portland Women's union, $40,000 to the Boy's and Girl's Aid society, $10,000 to relatives in Maine, and a couple of thousand to friends here, and the residue of about $125,000 to the Portland library, with which to erect its contemplated new building and create the nucleus of an art gallery. Her estate was valued at about $200,000.

A correspondent of the Northwest Lumberman says green trees on the Sound will burn like tinder. He says he saw a green tree of that species at Whatcom burned half down by simply having an auger hole bored through it, with an upward slant on one side, so as to create an air draught, and stuffed with kindling. The interior of the tree being thus ignited, the trunk burned like a torch. That struck the correspondent as decidedly against that kind of timber as a permanent investment. He thinks that since numerous settlers have gone into the Sound region, and are clearing farms, the liability of fires has greatly increased, and will continue to do so in ratio with the progress of settlement.

Evidence of unusual weight will be introduced in the suit now being held at Portland, wherein Norton Bros., of Chicago, seek to restrain the Jensen Canfilling-Machine company, of this city, from manufacturing machinery from patents on improvements invented by M. Jensen. To practically illustrate points brought forward in the case the Norton people, and the home company have caused sundry machines to be transported to the court room, there set up and put in practical operation. The case is being tried before Judge Lorenzo Sawyer, and if he is a careful observer he will know more about packing salmon, and the modus operandi thereof at the close of the trial than he ever did before.

The work of collecting spawn at the Clackamas hatchery, says the Oregonian, is about over for this season, as the supply of fish is practically exhausted. The eggs collected early in the season are beginning to hatch and as only about four million have been collected it is probable that they may all be hatched and placed in the river before freezing weather comes. The eggs in the McDonald jars placed in the fair, are beginning to hatch and the tiny salmon will be quite an attraction. The unfortunate breaking of the rack above the pool at the Clackamas hatchery last spring released a good many thousand fine salmon, every one of which were captured a few miles above, to the great profit of a few fishermen. Next year the rack should be watched to see that this misfortune is not repeated.

Is it not a pity that so much scientific energy and research should be wasted in providing forecast of the unpleasant weather forwarded to us regularly from Washington, when every householder or even lodger has at his disposal an infallible weather prophet in the shape of a cup of ordinary cafe au lait, taken with sugar. Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof; few pine to penetrate the weather secrets of the morrow. To discover those of the coming six hours or so all they have to do is to drop two lumps of sugar exactly in the center of a cup filled with coffee and milk, in just proportions, and then to watch the surface of that refreshing beverage. Gaseous bubbles will presently arise and gather together in a group or groups. If they make a sudden rush to the side of the cup "much rain" will be the order of the day. Should their eccentric movement be performed with stately deliberation, "showery" will be the word. If, however, they retain their central station slowly rotating until they burst, the barometer that does not indicate "set fair" may be assumed not to know its business. This is the latest of the thousand and one unerring appliances of weather wisdom. Bubble prognostication looks as simple as fortune-telling.
