

The Teacher

Who advised her pupils to strengthen their minds by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, appreciated the truth that bodily health is essential to mental vigor. For persons of delicate and feeble constitution, whether young or old, this medicine is remarkably beneficial. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring and fall I take a number of bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am greatly benefited."—Mrs. James H. Eastman, Stoneham, Mass.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla with great benefit in my general health."—Miss Thirza L. Creer, Palmyra, Md.

"My daughter, twelve years of age, was suffering for the past year from General Debility.

A few weeks since, we began to give her Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Her health has greatly improved."—Mrs. Harriet H. Battles, South Chelmsford, Mass.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, have greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Moluncus, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. J. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

"I suffered from

Nervous Prostration,

with lame back and headache, and have been much benefited by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I am now 80 years of age, and am satisfied that my present health and prolonged life are due to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Lucy Moffitt, Killings, Conn.

"Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 79 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: 'After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned.'"

HER LIFE'S ROMANCE.

A Marriage of Pique and the Result.

Poverty and Wretchedness—Divorce and Marriage.

Standing on the corner, where the Brunswick overlooks Madison Square, a day or two ago, I saw a pretty little woman in a neat, quiet, black and white gown, coming in my direction. She was about thirty-three or thirty-four, had a clear, peach-like skin, handsome dark eyes and bright, brown, curly hair, drawn up under her stylish bonnet. Her finger was as pretty as a girl's, her step light, and altogether she was as plump, pleasing and wholesome as a small female as one would care to see, says the "New York Gossip" in the Brooklyn Eagle. As she passed close to where I stood with a friend, she said, without turning her head, or looking in our direction, "How do you do, Mr. Blank?" and passed on without a perceptible pause. Blank started violently, and said "By Jove!" in an amazed tone, and bolted after the little woman, who had continued her quick pace through the square. He caught up with her, spoke, and I saw some words pass between them, after which he joined her, and the two went on down toward Twenty-third street. I was very much surprised, for she did not look the sort of a woman who scrapes acquaintances in the street, and as I had business down on Twenty-third street and Blank had deserted me, I decided to stroll that way and keep them in sight. Blank was evidently very much interested and seemed to be pleading for something to which the woman acquiesced at last and it ended by their going together into a little restaurant on the shopping thoroughfare that is the haunt of women who are down in the shops near lunch time. I left them there and did not see Blank again for a day or two, when he told me the story of the little woman in black and white.

It seems she was a noted belle ten years ago and was engaged to be married to a man who had his way still to make in life. The marriage had been fixed twice and both times something unforeseen had occurred to prevent it. Finally it was arranged for a third time and the cards issued, when the young man came to his fiancée and begged that she defer it for the third time, as he had just been ordered away by the hands of his firm on a very tedious and unpleasant journey, on which he would not be permitted to take her, and he could not possibly return in time for the date fixed. His whole future depended upon this and he was obliged to ask her to wait. Her pride was wounded deeply, for both of the previous postponements had been made by him, and without stopping to be reasonable or considerate, she promptly broke the engagement and entirely severed all connections with him. Another lover, who had long and vainly sought her, came that evening to see her and she told him her troubles. He begged her to take him instead, and on the day that she was to have been married the ceremony took place, but the bridegroom was the persistent lover. Like all marriages of pique it was a failure. The man was in no way worthy of her, and a knowledge of this had dictated her former refusals. He spent all her fortune and his own, drank, outraged all her feelings, and at the end of eight years of married life she found herself in a fifth-rate, filthy boarding house in Chicago, with three children, her health wrecked, her husband a gambler and a drunkard who was permitting her and her children to starve. They only had one visitor, a gambler and a sharper who had met her husband in the course of his downward career and whose acquaintance her husband had thrust upon her with that of many others much lower, but this man at least, whatever he might be morally, was kind to her and her children, loaned them money when they would otherwise have starved, and did his best to make her lot a little less intolerable to her. The husband meanwhile went always deeper into the mire and began

DYSPEPSIA.

Causes of the Tide's Ebb and Flow. No movement of the sea is more important than the regular rise and fall, once in about 25 hours, which we know as the tide. The movement is due to the difference between the attractions exerted by the moon and sun upon the solid earth and those exerted upon the oceanic envelope. Attraction, as shown by Newton, varies not only directly as the mass, but also inversely as the square of the distance; thus at an equal distance one body will exert double the attraction of another of half the mass; but if the distance of one body be twice that of the other and the masses equal, the attraction of the more distant will be but a quarter of that of the nearer. So the immense mass of the sun exerts, in spite of its greater distance, a far greater attraction upon the earth as a whole than does the moon.

The underlying cause is in the LIVER.

It will correct Acidity of the Stomach, Expel foul gases, Alleviate Irritation, Assist Digestion, and, at the same time

Start the Liver to working, when all other troubles soon disappear.

"My wife was a confirmed dyspeptic. Some three years ago by the advice of Dr. Steiner, of Augusta, she was induced to try Simmons' Liver Regulator. I feel grateful for the relief it has given her, and may all who read this and are afflicted in any way, whether chronic or otherwise, use Simmons' Liver Regulator. It is a faithful health will be restored to all who will be advised."—Wm. M. KERRAN, Fort Valley, Ga.

at last to beat her in the most brutal way. Even this she bore until in one of his drunken frenzies he attempted to kill her baby. Then she sent for the gambler and said: "Help me!" "There is only one way in which I can protect and help you," he said. "Get a divorce from this brute, and I will marry you and adopt all your children as my own. You know what my life is. Don't attempt to interfere with it, and you must obey me in all things, but I will never ask you to do anything wrong, and I will love you and care for your babies." She thought it over for twenty-four hours and said: "Yes."

There was a quickly obtained divorce and an immediate marriage, and the gambler, to save her annoyance from her discarded husband, brought her to New York. Here he secured a handsome flat, furnished it luxuriously, and said: "You must be content with me, with your babies, your books and your music, for you cannot have friends of any sort. It is too dangerous for me." "For my husband's hand," she exclaimed, "is what is known as a 'crook.' He not only gambles, but is at the head of the counterfeiters. He makes, or rather buys a little of it—not much, for his business does not require a great deal. All day he sits at his desk addressing circulars to people to whom he offers to send $50 of counterfeit for $10 of the genuine, and so on in proportion. These letters he sends mostly by express, and receives the answers in the same way to escape the surveillance in the mails. He says he has fixed matters not only with the express companies, but with the police as well, and runs but very small risks, but still he takes all precautions, uses some forty or fifty aliases, and has as many different addresses. You would be perfectly astonished to see how many dishonest and gullible people there are in this country, judging by the number who send the money to buy counterfeit."

"My husband often gets as much as $50 or $100 in one day. Of course he does not send counterfeits back to them. There would be too much danger in that, but he does send a package which, when opened, contains only bits of newspaper. Of course the man who is cheated dare not complain, as it has happened while he himself was trying to commit a crime. My husband makes a great deal of money gambling, too, for he is a very cool and careful player. Of course, this is all very hideous, but even this is not so bad as when my babies were in danger of their lives, and he is the soul of goodness and tenderness to us all. I have implored him over and over again, in spite of my promise, to give up the life and earn our living honestly, and he has promised at last to abandon this business within the next three years, for he constantly invests what he makes, and, I believe, is getting rich. I never see anyone but him and my babies and I rarely go out in the daytime, but to-day as I was passing you I could not help speaking the memory of the old days was so strong upon me at the sight of your face. I shall probably never see you again, and for my sake if you see me anywhere in the future with any man don't speak to me. It will be my husband. Good-by. It has been a great pleasure to see you and to pour out my heart to some one."

Blank told me this with a suspicion of tears in his eyes. "If you could have known her as I did!" he exclaimed. "How pretty and proud she was, and to see her brought to this!" "It only demonstrates," I replied, "what I have often said: That half the people whom you pass in the streets of New York could, if they chose, tell you stories of their lives a great deal queerer and more romantic than you read in the novels."

No fictions, certificates, but solid facts, testify the marvelous cures by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

DYSPEPSIA.

Causes of the Tide's Ebb and Flow. No movement of the sea is more important than the regular rise and fall, once in about 25 hours, which we know as the tide. The movement is due to the difference between the attractions exerted by the moon and sun upon the solid earth and those exerted upon the oceanic envelope. Attraction, as shown by Newton, varies not only directly as the mass, but also inversely as the square of the distance; thus at an equal distance one body will exert double the attraction of another of half the mass; but if the distance of one body be twice that of the other and the masses equal, the attraction of the more distant will be but a quarter of that of the nearer. So the immense mass of the sun exerts, in spite of its greater distance, a far greater attraction upon the earth as a whole than does the moon.

The difference, however, between the sun's attraction upon the solid earth and its attraction upon the ocean is, on account of its distance, but a small fraction of its total attraction; while that between the moon's attraction upon the solid earth and its attraction upon the ocean, owing to its comparatively small distance of 240,000 miles, is a very considerable fraction of its total attraction.

So that while the earth's attraction causes the moon to travel round it once a month, the reciprocal attraction of the moon is mainly effectual in causing the tides, the sun's action being only about one-third as great. The waters of the open ocean have a tendency to rise up in a heap on the side nearest the moon, because they are pulled more strongly than is the solid globe, and being liquid, yield to the attraction. Simultaneously a similar heaping up occurs at the antipodes of this point—on the side that is farthest from the moon—because the solid globe is, as it were, pulled away from the water there.

Two great tidal waves are thus originated; and, as the earth's movement in its orbit, coupled with its daily rotation, makes the moon occupy the same relative position every 25 hours—or, more exactly, every 24 hours and 50 minutes—high tide at any place occurs twice in every such period of time.

Herculean Strength. Continually on the strain, or overtaxed at intervals, is far less desirable than ordinary vigor perpetuated by rational diet and exercise, and abstention from excess. Professional pugilists and athletes rarely attain extreme old age. An ordinary vigor may be retained by wise regard for sanitary living, and for the protection against disease which timely and judicious medication affords, so also it may be lost through prolonged sedentary labor, unwholesome and unsteady eating and drinking, the chief and most immediate sequence of all four being dyspepsia. For this condition, or in any way induced, and for its offspring, a failure of muscular and nerve power, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the prime and most general remedy. It not only purifies the blood, but also, by its tonic and stimulant qualities, banishes and restores, bowel and liver complaint removed by it.

Making Doubly Sure—Charles F. Orris of Buffalo cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor and seating himself in a chair calmly smoked a cigarette while awaiting death. He wanted to die, and he got the impression that the cigarette was not sufficient.—World.

PIMPLES ON THE FACE. Denote an impure state of the blood and are looked upon by many with suspicion. Acker's Blood Elixir will remove all impurities and leave the complexion smooth and clear. There is nothing that will so thoroughly build up the constitution, purify and strengthen the whole system. Sold and guaranteed by J. W. Conn, Druggist.

While everything else has taken a step forward in the last decade, the manner of putting up a stove remains the same. The tools are those used fifty years ago—an axe, a crowbar, a hundred cuss words and a crushed foot.—Detroit Free Press.

A DUTY TO YOURSELF. It is surprising that people will use a common, ordinary pill when they can secure a valuable English one for the same money. Dr. Acker's English Pills are a positive cure for sick-headache and all liver troubles. They are small, sweet, easily taken and do not grip. J. W. Conn, Druggist.

Colorado leads in silver production. Exactly What is Sought After. A safe, reliable, harmless, not repulsive remedy that can be taken without changing the regular diet or disorganizing the system; a vegetable compound assisting nature to get rid of impurities in a gradual manner as nature intended. Such is Simmons' Liver Regulator, and a trial proves this to be the most skeptical. Complete satisfaction is guaranteed, and certainly it is a satisfaction to find the head clear, the bowels regular, the blood purified and the breath sweet.
