Says a Washington special to the Oregonian: For several days past the Oregon delegation has been in earnest consultation, trying to agree upon the appointments yet to be made in that state. At the close of each session the senators get together with Mr. Hermann and discuss the applications on file, and try to settle all differences of opinion. It is expected that an agreement will be reached in a few days The senators and representatives are also in the midst of patronage work, and trying hard to reach some satisfactory agreement.

The matter is all in hand for the New Year's edition of THE ASTORIAN, and no more advertisements can be received. Orders for copies of the New Year's issue will, however, be received till next Monday, the 23rd. It will be a big advertisement for Astoria: if you feel like sending some away, leave your orders for the number you want before Monday next. > evening a strange thing occurred, which teaches a valuable lesson. It is just a simple unchronicled fact. A shy young man decided to abandon a venerable pair of trousers to their fate, having just secured a new pair as he went on the boat. So he said to him-self, "I will just drop them out of my cabin window into the remorseless tide, and all will be buried in the great, calm bosom of the old Columbia." the reward is to be paid out of the He rolled them up carefully and shied contingent fund of the house: adoptthem far, far out over the gunwale of the boat near the bow. As they sped through the air they unfurled with a soul-piercing plunk. They filled with air and looked, as they struck on the erest of the waves, like a man looking over to peer down into the depths of tide. A nervous woman about midships heard the impact of the abandoned trousers, and looking down with a shudder, said: "Me Gawd, a human being has went to his ac-count." She then became the auther of a loud yelp, and all hands rushed to the grards with the cry of "Man overboard!" that awful cry which once heard can never be forgotten. A hundred hands ran to the lower decks and amid the cries of women and the quick drawn breath of pale men, a tall roustabout jabbed the rowning man in the vitals with a jabber, and while fainting passengers looked the other way, he pulled out the now collapsed trousers and found on the inside of the waistband the name of the owner, also the leg and waist measurement, together with the name of an Astoria tailor. Then they began to hunt over the boat and in the dregs of the river for the man who given Monday night to Henry M. had occupied the tronsers aforetime, Stanley by Coleman Smith, the Britand that shy young man's name was ish consul General Stanley highly in every mouth and he didn't dare to praised the Zanzibarians who accomjet black mustache, which could be distinctly seen when he left, from very fright turned around and went back
