Woolen Goods Rustling Like Silk.

There is a little Yankee dressmaker in this city who has just had a lucky idea, and is throwing it already. When ladies come to her with the goods to make up an ordinary worsted dress, she asks: "Will you have it made to feel like silk or wool?" Then the owner of the dress naturally inquires into the meaning of the question. "It's all in the lining. I can give you a lining that will rustle like silk when you walk along the street and that will keep you think warmer than you know it is. It is silk, and it will only cost you 30 cents a yard." "Oh, no," the economical dresser says, "I cannot afford it." "Then you will have a lining at 6 cents a yard without any front!" the little dressmaker repeats in a disapproving tone. But the fancy of the patrons is caught by the alluring prospect of having her woolen dress rustle like silk, and she leaves an order for this cloud of silver lining. And the catchy little device is a success of the art.—Levellon Journal.
