He emained a minority member until the eturn of Peel to power in 1841, when he became vice-president of the board of trade and master of the mint. It was then that Gladstone faced the rising tide for the repeal of the corn laws with a bill for a sliding scale of corn duties which the great Cobden denounced as "an insult to a suffering people."

In the same session Mr. Gladstone forced to passage a measure of his own in which out of 1,200 duty-paying ar ticles a total abolition or a considerable reduction was made in 750. At this time his unsurpassed mastery of detail was shown, "his ability to make statistics eloquent." In 1843 he abol-ished the restrictions on the exportation of machinery. The next year he carried the measure to broaden rail-way service for the people. On the top of these popular measures he voted for the Maynooth improvement bill." yet admitted that "exclusive support to the established church was being more and more abandoned every

In 1846 perhaps the noblest service of Mr. Gladstone's life was rendered to the repeal of the corn laws, in which he stood only less conspicuous than Peel, Cobden and Bright. When the great Sir Robert resigned office at the close of that parliament, it was a sin-gular fact that he went out on the inisters defeat in an endeavor to pass an almost inhuman Irish coercion bill. The homes of Englishmen had been made brighter by untaxed bread.
The homes of Ireland were to be darkened by the shadow of despotism.
Mr. Gladstone supported coercion as earnestly as he favored free food. Small wonder is that Peel

In France skinned dogfish are sold as Dutch eels. It is said that sorats are often canned as sardines or anchooften canned as sardines or anchovies, and anchovy paste largely consists of them. Now in America split herrings are sold as anchovies and small herrings as sardines. The so-called Russian sardines are, it appears, only small herrings, flavored with spices. To save the trouble of smoking herrings, some dealers use a special varnish, having a smoky taste. Even lobsters and crabs are loaded and made heavier by having a piece of fresh haddock or other fish inserted. Whed they have begun to grow stale the remedy is to reboil them, and by that means the odor of decomposition is destroyed. As for caviares made from the roes of sturgeon, they are often "fixed" with roes taken from in-ferior fish. Dr. Hamilton found much to condemn about canned fish here being a frequent lack of care and cleanliness, and often a sub-stitution of a cheaper and coarser fish for that supposed to be held by the cans. There is good reason to believe that (rands in the fish trade are much
