FUGACIOUS SCISSORS.
An Instrument Which Disappears in The Most Mysterious Manner.

The apparently fugacious habits of scissors have been noticed since the earliest historic period. They disappear with a celerity and secrecy wholly unparalleled in the history of lost objects. A woman is sewing and has a pair of scissors in her lap. She uses them a few times, and each time drops them again in her lap. The third time she wishes to use them she cannot find them. Though she searches her lap, her dress, her chair and the floor thoroughly, she cannot find the slightest trace of the missing scissors, and thereafter they are never again seen by mortal eyes. Or, let us say that a woman, in the very act of using a pair of scissors, is called from her work. She places the scissors carefully in her work basket, goes out, locking the door of the room after her, and returns in ten or fifteen minutes to find her scissors gone.

What is the more remarkable about the disappearance of scissors is that once having disappeared they are never again found. You may lose a tack hammer or a comb, but sooner or later you find the missing article behind some piece of furniture, but pair of scissors once lost are lost forever. There is scarcely a case on record of the final recovery of a pair of scissors that have been missed and have not been found within the next five minutes.

That there is something peculiar in the disappearance of scissors is virtually admitted by women when they seek to prevent the loss of scissors by means of charms. For a piece of ribbon, which many women attach to the handle of their scissors "to prevent them from being lost," must not act as a charm, or otherwise it would be worthless. How, in the name of science and common sense, can the mere fact that four inches of blue ribbon tied to the handle of a pair of scissors keep them from being missed? In point of fact, nothing of the kind is true. In spite of woman's faith in the blue-ribbon charm, it is absolutely useless. If, however, we assume that the origin of this custom was the attaching of a bit of witch-hazel to the handle of a pair of scissors, we can understand it. The woman of the middle ages had a vague belief that the disappearance of a pair of scissors was due to the witch-hazel and therefore called in the presence of hatters, the peculiar quality of witch-hazel, fancies that anything tied to a pair of scissors will keep them from being lost, and she prefers ribbon to witch-hazel because it is prettier and more convenient.
