Of course this is not right. No excuse can justify it. The statement was made by the steamer officials that the Astoria bags were at the bottom of the heap and could not be got out. Two mistakes were made; first, when the bags were boaded on the boat at San Francisco, nection with the company, prior to that for Astoria should have been put his taking a prominent position in the on top or where it would be easily ac- post office. cessable; secondly on the trip up with an abundance of time the pouches should have been extricated from their obscure place and made ready for put-ting off. The freight is always arranged during the trip and there is no valid reason for neglecting the mail. Only three pouches full of papers were delivered at the Astoria office. Portland may be the main distributing point for this section, but there is no justice in shipping mail to that town up the river when it is already sorted and pouched for Astoria.
