Men of intellect and education who are capable of enthusiasm and ardor in the service of mankind are deterred from seeking to do that service through the Christian ministry. They cannot honorably accept its doctrinal restrictions. Hence they are excluded from a calling in which they are fitted to accomplish great good for the human race. The young generation, absorbing as it grows to maturity the knowledge and thought of the living time, the results of investigation and criticism that filter from the studies of scholars through the printing press, the public library, and the reading room, and permeates the subtle medium of com-munication in which all society moves and lives, is repelled from religious association by dogne which its common sense will not accept.

The prediction in Victor Hugo's tale of the time of Louis XL. that the printing press would kill the church was true of the ecclesiastical fabric of that time, which is already a curious fossil. Whether it is true of the universal Christian church depends upon whether the vitality of that body is in the integuments of creed and doctrine that have been wrapped about it, or in the human soul.—Forum.

Bismarck's Temper at White Heat.

Berlin, March 25.-Herr Richter's adical organ describes Prince Bismarck's present frame of mind as a white heat of passion. He is said to be enraged at the calmness with which his final resignation has been regarded by the nation at large; and the discov-ery that his personal importance at this era of European progress is not thought so great by others as by humself, has thrown him into a violent temper. It is stated that Bismarek has bought a villa in Switzerland and

Why There Are Few Great Preacher

A Russian scientist bought four infant children and confined them in separate rooms. They were taught absolutely nothing and were waited upon by deaf and dumb attendants. They were plentifully supplied with good food and the rooms were large and well warmed and ventilated, but the infants were allowed no clothing and were eaged like animals and as such grew up. He was arrested for cruelty to children, but was released. He wants to find what are the instincts
