Attorney for Plaintiff,

Two From Captain Alles.

Congressman Allen has just told another one. He was talking to a Washington Post reporter about his experience during the last campaign when he spent some six weeks be-tween Democratic headquarters in New York and his various assignments

New York and his various assignments through the country.

"The Democratic party just before and after the election last fall, reminded me," said he, "of the last coon hunt 1 ever went on. We had had a tremendous chase through the swamp for about four hours, and the dogs had finally treed a coon in a big, bushy-topped pine. One of the darkies then shinned up till he spied the animal snugly stowed away ont on a spreading limb. He climbed out on the limb below and got a good grip on the coon's branch.

"'Git de dogs un'er de tree,' he shouted; 'coon's a-comin' down.' "No sooner did he give the limb a vigorous shake than the one on which he stood cracked and began to give away rapidly.

"Git de dogs f'm ud'er de tree;' he yelled; 'hit's me dat's comin' down.' " Captain Allen came in from his last and and picked over the mass of telegrams for crumbs of comfort. Suddenly he held out one and exclaimed:

"What did I tell you? Here is a dispatch saying that California has given 10,000 Democratic majority."

"Brice," said Captain Allen, "I can't help thinking of Jim Coe when I hear you talk that way."

"Well what about Jim Coesas appetite, cleanses the stomach sweetens the breath.
