San Francisco, June 12.—The ceamer Moonlight has arrived from the north with a cargo of lumber. The Moonlight was recently built in The Moonlight was recently built in Oregon for the purpose of testing the worth and expediency of a system of steam propulsion by means of gasoline. The tonnage of the steamer is about seventy-five. She was fitted out with a novel engine and appertaining apparatus, the whole set in motion by the use of gasoline. Previous experiments on lighter crafts propelled by naptha have been uniformly successful, and it was thought that gasoline would work even better. line would work even better.

When fairly out on the voyage it developed that the experiment was a failure. The engine failed to work, and got out of gear. The result is to establish the fact that gasoline or aptha is not serviceable on vessels of any great tonuage. The Moonlight had to abandon her engines and reached port under sail.
