Curiosities of the News.

The first sea serpent of the season is reported off Block Island, rearing its awful head and waving its huge tail as usual. When it appears in its favorite haunts off Nahant will some one kindly snap a kodak on it—Boston paper.

A chicken which, though healthy and flourishing, will always have to be fed by human hands, attracts attention in North Plainfield, N. J. The upper half of its bill is rolled back in a tight ball between the eyes. The lower half is natural and perfect.

It is reported that a young lady at Devonport, Iowa, is gradually becoming copper-colored. The change began eighteen months ago on the tips of her fingers and sole of her feet. She is in good health and the doctors are mystified by the occurrence.

Residents of California, Nevada and Arizona have a drink that is not found in the east. It is called an oyster cocktail. In the preparation of this queer drink Puget Sound oysters, no bigger than a thumb nail, are used. Four or five of these oysters are placed in the bottom of a glass, and a sufficient quantity of whisky to suit the taste of the drinker is poured upon the oysters. On account of their size the oysters are carried easily on the current of the whisky over the palate.—Baltimore Sun.

A new device has been discovered for electric light globes in Boston. The spring birds have found that they make excellent places in which to build their nests, sheltered as is the inner space from the winds and storms, and many a lively and lovely courtship may be seen almost any day by glancing at the top of the tall poles.

It is said that the last words of a boy drowned in the river at Johnstown, Penn., the other day, were addressing his brother: "Steve, be sure and take the milk home." This was an errand which the boys had been sent to do.

A two-headed snake is on exhibition at Bridgeton.—Philadelphia Record. Dr. Ellis, a St. Paul dentist, recently put a gold crown on the decayed tooth of an actress and inserted a small diamond in the gold. The stone is not conspicuous and might escape notice altogether, although a ray of artificial light makes it sparkle in a way to arouse curiosity.
