SATURDAY. AUGUST 9, 18:0 A PERIOD OF BUBBLE BLOWING.

NEVER was the air so full of fanciful schemes by which to live on that unther undefined quantity known as "the government" as now, says the Boston Giobe. The government is to han amoney to all comers at I per cent. The government is to abolish all bendlordism. The government is to become the guardian of all unemplayed labor and organize it into an industrial army as aervice pensioners. In short, there seems to be no end of these schemes, and, what is more astonishing, men of reputation for politscal sanity are willing to let them go upon the recents of congress as seriour proportion of statesmanship.

In non-political circles there is also season a prolific batch of co-operative curios-ities. The social fad of the period is builble blowing. There are schemes by which a workingman can get a up their not racks and making other bouse for nothing. There are schemes needed improvements for next season. involving the credit card system, by Elmore and Leinenweber intend to which the more a man cuts the more pack fish at Tillamook this fall. Tax bill submitted to congress by the postmaster general for the purpos of closing the mails against lottery advertisements says in substance:

Nothwithstanding the declaration that no letters and circulars concerning lotteries shall be carried in the mails, and that public sentiment condeans the use of the post office for ROSS OPERA HOUSE lottery purposes, every-railway, postal cur, star route, money order, and registry office is in active daily use by the Louisiana Lottery company. THURSDAY, Aug. 14, 1890 The feathold of the business seems to he firmer and its operations wider and its enterprise bolder than ever before.

"This vast business is terribly depostal employe readily assumes that a letter directed to the lottery company contains money; that it is in the mails in violation of the spirit of the law; that its less would be difficult to trace, and that an attempt to punish the 12 c STARS . 12 offender who shall abstract it will more likely fail than prosecutions of on ordinary character. Hence the temptation to purioin it is exceptionally great,"

If this is a fact and it seems scarcely possible—there certainly should be some legal provision. At present there are a dozen or more, probably twenty, boles in street planks where horses are liable to receive broken logs, and the street superintendent should be empowered to have them repaired at the expense of the city, or elso some way should be provided to compel property owners to do it.
