

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1908

The Columbia Chronicle published weekly at Dayton, Columbia county, Washington, has been enlarged, and now appears as an eight-page paper of five columns to the page.

A novel way of fighting fire has just been adopted on the vast plains in North Dakota, where thousands of acres along the Little Missouri river were swept by fire. Horses were killed, split up the back, and with long ropes their carcasses were dragged over the burning grass.

Some papers fail after they are started, but in Brentwood, California, a paper stopped before it was started. A new paper was about to be issued, and the type was all set up for the first number, but the day before it was to be printed the office and contents were destroyed by fire. That certainly was hard luck for the would-be publisher.

Several telegrams have been cabled to this country of great things which the Marquis de Lenville was to do, and how he would sue every American newspaper which had dared to comment on the love affair and proposed marriage between himself and Mrs. Frank Leslie. Now it appears that he has arranged for a duel with a reporter of a London paper, the result of which is not stated.

That a soldier who risked his life for his country in the hour of her peril should be sent to a county hospital in the days of his infirmity is a disgrace to the American nation. At Oakland, Cal., yesterday, an invalid G. A. R. man was sent to the county hospital, which so worked upon his feelings that he killed himself in a few minutes by firing a bullet into his head. The men who helped to save the country in the days of their young manhood should, in their old age and helplessness, be tenderly cared for by the land they preserved.

Reciprocity Needed.

"What's that?" asked the Fourth street belle, as he parlied a kiss from her.
"That's free trade," he replied.
"And what's this?" she inquired as she kissed him in return.
"Reciprocity, I suppose."
"Well," she gurgled, "I guess we need reciprocity, don't we?"
"That's what the nation wants," he said.—Williamsport Sun.
