A Touching Incident.

An incident of a peculiarly touching character occurred yesterday in one of the elevated railroad cars. The train brought to a halt at the station. The train had just left One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street when the passengers saw entering the car a little boy about six years old, half carried by an older boy, evidently his brother. Both were well dressed, but at first glance it was seen that the little fellow was blind. He had a pale, wan face, but was smiling. A quick look of sympathy passed over the faces of the passengers, and an old gray-haired gentleman got up and gave his seat to the two. The "big brother," who was about 11 years old, tenderly lifted up the little blind boy and placed him on his knee. "How is that?" he asked. "Nice," said the little chap. "Where's my 'monica'?" This puzzled some of the passengers, and several turned to see what the child meant. Finally the "big brother" leaned down and told the little one to get ready to leave, as the train was nearing its station. Then, as if he knew he had won a whole car of friends, the blind boy quickly changed "The Sandstone River" into "Auld Lang Syne," and with one accord the passengers burst into a round of applause, while the "big brother" carried the little one out of the car. - New York Times.

Our great offer to subscribers is a set of the Works of Charles Dickens, the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are now more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, and a description of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home could be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a premium to our subscribers is printed from entirely new plates, with new types, published complete, uncut, and absolutely unabridged.

Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.
