Yesterday one of the electrical experts explained the cause of the sud den stoppage of the incandescent lights in this office at I o'clock yesterday morning. He said it was on ac count of the fuse wire in the strip box being too small for the number of lights we used. A larger one was put in and the lights were even more brill-iant than before, and all was serene until just before midnight, when out they went, and the gas was again brought into use. Give us a fuse wire this time large enough to do the work, for it is unpleasant to suddenly lose eighteen lights.
