ST. HELENS NOTES.

Copied from the "Oregon Mist" of Thursday, November 27, 1890.

These are the days when the winds of autumn fan the face of nature into a ruddy glow.

The cells are being put in the new jail and in a short time will be ready to receive miss-doers.

The brown and golden hue of the distant mountains reminds us that another winter is almost here.

Several fishermen reside at St. Helens. They make a good living besides laying up considerable money.

The broad bosom of the Columbia, rippled by a gentle breeze, reflects the diamond's flashes these moonlit nights.

Letters of administration on the estate of Captain Isaac Thomas, deceased, were filed with the county clerk Tuesday.

And still reports come in of new comers arriving in all parts of Columbia county. This is only a beginning of what is to come.

To make a city attractive, it should be kept clean and neat. Work on the streets and alleys of St. Helens, would do much toward this end.

Petitions for county roads in the Carrioo and Nehalem valleys have been posted, and will be presented at the January term of the county court.

It is now an almost settled fact that the Great Northern railroad, reaching out for the vast products of Oregon, will cross the Columbia near Rainier.

If preparations for improvement which are now on foot are consummated, St. Helens will prove no mean rival to the leading cities of the Columbia in the near future.

Considerable activity is noted in the Seaport iron district this week. Portland parties are negotiating for the purchase of some of them and preparations are being made to push work on others.

That board of trade has not been organized yet. A meeting should be called at once, and steps for organization taken. The sooner this is done, the sooner will the town attract attention.

Parties in St. Helens will soon begin fishing for sturgeon by setting books where the fish will run into them. There are several very large books placed on a line a short distance apart and so arranged that the fish will strike them in passing. When they are caught by one hook, they drop round and become entangled on the other hooks, making it impossible for them to escape.

In the near future, St. Helens will refuse to act as the tail to the Astoria or Portland kite, but will fly through the buoyant atmosphere of development and progress in this country. For some time past these places have been prone to look upon Columbia county as a tributary county merely, and whatever they have done toward development here has been in a half-hearted and purely selfish way. Times are changing, however, and we now find that we are abundantly able to fly our own kite and push boldly to the front as one of the leading cities of the lower Columbia.
