Trathful Words by an Unknown Author.

You can track a bear, and hunt You can track a bear, and hunt a tiger, and kill a lion, but a lie evades the skill of the huntsman. God help us all when a dangerous lie is let loose in the world by an unserupulous tongue. A good record may be yours and a blameless reputation, but let the hungry wolf of a lie get on your track and nothing short of a miracle will save your good name from its fangs. I used to think that a lie could be lived down, but I begin to think be lived down, but I begin to think that a good man might as well be a bad one when lying tongues assail him for all the good his past record is going to do him. This is an evil time and men's thoughts turn readily to evil reports. Like hounds that hear the "view halloo" and scent the fresh game in the dew, so do men's thoughts run forward to join the chase that has for game a woman's honor or a good man's fame.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been celebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are theusands of homes in America not yepplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works. The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a
