In regard to the new and fast steamer now being built in Portland for service on the Sound, the Oregonian says that the work on the Victortan is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible, though it will yet be two or three months before she is ready for her trial trip. She is lying at the Willamette Iron works' dock, where her machinery is being put into place. The boilers, bedplates, condensers and housings of the engine are already set and there is yet to be put in the cylin-ders, shafts, crank shafts and steam-pipes. One cylinder is now aboard and the other two are lying on the dock. Investigation by the officers dis-closed that the burglars had scuttled up through the floor and charged the safe with gunpowder. The shot they placed in over the combination was a very heavy one, for the safe doors were not only blown off their hinges but the lock and combination also were broken, and the safe doors wer thrown clear across the office, a dis-tance of several feet. The walls of the office were bulged out and the glass blown out of the window, while the door was blown off its hinges.
