The New Steamer

Captain O. W. Fahrenhelt, local inspector of this lighthouse district, left for San Francisco Thursday to examine into the condition of the lighthouse tender Columbine, which arrived at that port last Saturday. The Columbine broke her propeller on her long voyage from New York around the Horn to this coast, which together with other repairs that will be made, will detain her at San Francisco for over a month

The arrival of the Columbine is anxlously awaited by the local lighthouse men, and the day will be hailed with joy when she takes her place alongside of the everburdened Manzanita. All persons familiar with the extent of this 13th district will readily understand how much another tender is needed, as the Manzanita cannot do all the work. The district embraces the entire coast line of Oregon, Washington and Alaska, with all connecting takes, rivers and bays. Most of the light stations are on wild, rocky shores, with no harbors. Supplies have to be taken from the steamer to the shore in a small boat, and when the sex is rolling high this is difficult and dangerous. Thus it is that the Manzanita lies idle at times, often for several days or a week, waiting for favorable weather to go to Tillamook, Yaquina, Destruction Island and other places.

Some details of the Columbine, as she will appear when she arrives here, may now be interesting. Her dimensions are as follows:

Length between perpendiculars, 145 feet; length over all, 155 feet; breadth molded, 26 feet 6 inches; depth of hold, 15 feet inches from top of beam to top of double bottom; depth of hold from top of beam to top of keel-plate, 15 feet 2 inches. She is a screw steamer, and will develop 600 horse power when the engine is making 110 revolutions per minute and 100 pounds steam pressure per square inch.

She has two cylindrical single-ended boilers, 10 feet 8 inches diameter outside the smallest course of shell, and 10 feet 9 Inches long from outside to outside of ends. The high pressure cylinder is 22 inches in diamete, proportioned to stand a pressure of 110 to the square inch. The low-pressure cylinder is 24 inches in diameter. There are a donkey engine, reversing engine and steam steering gear. There is one right-handed cast-iron screw propeller 9 feet 4 inches in diameter, driven by an inverted cylinder, surface-condensing, 2-cylinder, fore and aft compound engine, the cylinders to be 22 inches and 24 Inches in diameter, and a stroke of 30 inches.

The material of the hull is Siemens Martin mild steel, and it also is built with a double bottom, divided into four separate water-tight and independent compartments. There are eight watertight compartments, above, forward and aft the double bottom. In addition to the flat plate and protective keel, there are outside bilge- keels, one on each side of the vessel, extending about seventy feet, to revent rolling. She is wider than the 7:30 p. m. She has a deck meeting at 6:30 p. m. in the basement. house on the upper or superstructure spector's quarters, consisting of saloon, two state rooms, pantry and bath room These reach clear across the ship, and the crew, in going from stem to stern must pass over the superstructure deck. The vessel will be rigged as a two-masted schooner.

There are bath rooms, state rooms, berths, closets, and all necessary accommodations for the officers and crew, two boats, complete outfit for galley and pantries, and the entire material is to be

Bought from the Wrong Man.

Here is an instance of the spirit that is abroad in Astoria just now. There are several parties in the city who might well take a lesson from it. Some weeks ago Mr. Bartoldus, of the Walluski, brought into town several fine sacks of home grown cabbages. Anxious to get rid of them at the lowest possible figure, he offered them in turn to every local storekeeper. Nobody would buy, and Bartoldus sent the cabbages to a large whole-sale firm in Portland for disposal. A few days afterwards he was walking through Astoria, when he noticed standing on the sidewalk in front of two of the largest grocery stores in town the same cabbages, in the same sacks, as he had previously affered to the local dealers.

"Well," said the other breathlessly. "Then an idea struck me. I resolved upon a desperate course. I returned the $5 note to my friend the next day, and on his astonished countenance I saw the expression of which I was in search,

It was the rule in Ireland at one time that after an execution the body should hang an hour, but the sheriff, from mistaken lenity, would on some occasions look away after the prisoner had been turned off, while the friends of the cul-prit would hold up their companion by the waistband of the breeches so that the rope would not press upon his throat. When the hour was expired the deceased was put into a cart, which was driven at a gallop along the stony road This jolting generally brought the prisoner to. One such recovery was so com plete that the resuscitated man sat up in his coffin and gave three cheers. One of his friends was so shocked at this inde cent conduct that he hit the ex-corpse on the head with his shillelagh and finished him. The question then arose whether be successfully charged with the murder of a man who was already dead in law.
