An honest and complete telegraphic report gives a newspaper a right and title to the name. The news of the world, fresh every morning at your breakfast table, is what you can find in the Astorian. It holds the exclusive telegraphic franchise, and its service is improving daily.

There were packing boxes in the White House four years ago, when the Cleveland administration was preparing to remove their personal belongings to make way for the Harrisons, and there are packing boxes in the White House again, the Harrisons making ready for the return of the Cleveland; and something of the same sort will in all probability be going on four years hence.

In this connection there are two curious chances contemplated. One is that President Harrison may again succeed Cleveland, and the other that Cleveland may again break the record. The civil service reformers who want an official class, British and Chinese fashion, will, of course, insist upon two "consecutive" terms, and hold there is no more reason why a president should be re-elected from three elections than in England a man should be prevented from becoming Prime Minister three times. There is a difference, but the mugwumps and anti-mugs will not mind it a bit; and it is plain now that, under the weight of Mr. Cleveland's precepts and performances, the next four years are as likely to be barren as the last four in the productiveness of great men in the Democratic party. The only living men who have been Presidents of the United States are the two who will ride together to the Senate chamber on inauguration day next month, not as they rode four years ago, for it is Cleveland's turn to sit on the right. Each will then have had four years of the office, and one will start in on his second term. The fact that the succession falls to an ex-President occurs for the first time in our history, and has already presented itself as a business influence. There is not so much novelty about the change as there might have been. The people are well acquainted with both Harrison and Cleveland; and it does not require large experience or research to impart the general judgment that the man who has been President, and is returned to the office, is certain to be more of himself the second term than he was the first, and that the influence causing this development will be only the stronger in the case of an intermission between the terms. Since Jackson there has been but one President who lived through two terms—Grant—and but one other re-elected—Lincoln—and it is well remembered that Grant was more positive in his opinions the second term than the first, though he attached something less of importance to old military and personal associations in the second term than in the first. Jackson's second term was more Jacksonian than the first. That a like development would have taken place in Lincoln, if he had been spared, is as certain as anything can be that must be left to inference, reason, logic and the creative imagination. Mr. Cleveland is likely to be a remarkable illustration of what we may be permitted to call this historical principle. We are to have more Cleveland for the next four years than for the four years we had him. What he was he will be, only more so.

The vindication of the national banking system, just as the democratic party is going into power under various false pretenses, with wildcat banking schemes ready to be sprung, is the important news of the day, far surpassing in significance the defeat of Mr. Cleveland on the silver question and the Honolulu flag-tying sensation. It has been repeatedly explained to the astorians that the national banks could aid the treasury, as the treasury has aided the banks, in keeping the currency sound. As the supply of free gold became low, the banks gave their gold certificates for greenbacks, because the greenbacks are just as good. The treasury had, Jan. 21, of legal tender notes (old issue), greenbacks, $35,066,877; of treasury notes of '90, (legal tender and backed by silver at the gold standard), $4,019,142; and of gold certificates, $15,729,770, or $54,815,789 in paper equivalent to gold.

The Seattle Telegraph says that Attorney White, counsel for the defense in the Taylor case in Seattle, said of the plaintiffs (quoting from Shelley): "As a shark and dogfish wait Under an Atlantic tide For the Negro ship whose freight Is the theme of their debate; Wrinkling their red gills the while. 'Are ye two vultures sick for battle? Two scorpions under one wet stone. Two bloodless wolves, whose dry throats Rattle. Two crows perched on the murrained cattle, Two vipers tangled into one?' And the plaintiffs never winced or 'winked their red gills' as it were. White is a genius. He called his opponents sharks, dogfish, vipers, scorpions, wolves, and crows, all in two short minutes, and without a swear word."

There are apprehensions that Senator Hill will fight the coming President in "a contemptible way," and that he will make his assaults "behind the cover of pretended support and in the secret sessions of the Senate." He wouldn't be the first great Senator who was greatest in secret sessions, if he should justify this prophecy. The Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post says: "The whole bearing of Mr. Hill before, during and after his speech (which proved him an ignoramus and a middlehead) made it very plain that it is from him that Mr. Cleveland must expect the most trouble."

The Pacific Journal says: "Mayor Cooper of South Bend did not appreciate the remarks made in the Astorian concerning the outrage perpetrated on the law abiding citizens of Pacific county by the lawless ones of South Bend, by raiding the court house, and writes an explanation, which facts, if true, would put a different face on the matter. But Mr. Cooper had better kept quiet, for his explanations are so entirely at variance with all reports, as to be perfectly plain to anyone that both cannot be true."

The Salem Statesman has purchased two Mergenthaler Linotype Machines similar to that in use in our office. It is the first paper on the coast to follow in the lead of the Astorian, and we welcome it heartily over the border of the old system already doomed to death, and the new one just springing into active existence. The Statesman is a good newspaper. It will be better than ever when it starts to use the machines, and shows the result of their work.

The Dallas Times-Mountaineer says: "There is no danger of hoopskirts coming into vogue again. The press is a unit in the matter, and is already caricaturing it in great shape. Any woman who should be so senseless as to wear hoopskirts would soon find it so tropical that she would rejoice when out of them."

Now who told the Mountaineer that a woman felt tropical in hoopskirts? The Senate of the United States at present stands: Straight Democrats, 43; Republicans, 39; Populists, 3; Free Silverite, 1—Stewart—four to be chosen from North Dakota, Washington, Montana and Wyoming. The four will probably be two and two. So there are four more Democrats than Republicans, and the Pops have a squad favorable to any wild foolery.

A German cigarmaker in New York, who hanged himself yesterday, left $50 to be spent by the members of his "schutz-unbund" in drinking to his memory. This isn't as full of forethought as the Irishman, who, with his dying breath, said, in regard to the money collected for his funeral festivities, "Spind it going, boys—I'll not be with you coming back."

Berkman, the Anarchist assassin, testifies that his express and only object in going to Pittsburg in July last was to murder Mr. Frick. He merely succeeded in electing Grover Cleveland President of the United States. Mr. Frick is well. Mr. Berkman is suffering the inconvenience of incarceration.

"Our friend P. W. Parker, of the Astorian," says Statesman, "has become sole proprietor of that paper, having purchased the interest of Mr. Elmore in the property. We wish Mr. Parker the success he deserves."

The vindication of the national banking system, just as the democratic party is going into power under various false pretenses, with wildcat banking schemes ready to be sprung, is the important news of the day, far surpassing in significance the defeat of Mr. Cleveland on the silver question and the Honolulu flag-tying sen-
