The Portland Telegram is rampant. During the course of three articles on Senator Fulton with which it adorned its editorial columns on Saturday, it remarked: "President Fulton, of the senate, has eternally damned himself. His idiotic effort to initiate Tom Reed was the most illustrious exhibition of asininity ever witnessed in an Oregon legislature. When the Durham ballot bill was forced through the senate last night, the president of that body, unmindful of his position as an impartial presiding officer, made a constructive quorum when there was actually none present. Can Reed may have had some show or pretense of authority for his autocratic rulings, but there was actually none for the president of the senate in his infamous rulings on the Durham bill. On the contrary, senate rule 7, which was adopted for the government of that body and which the president was obligated by a solemn oath to enforce, distinctly says that no member shall even be permitted to vote on any question unless he is within the bar of the senate at the time the question is presented. If what authority count members as present and voting when they are outside the bar of the senate? It was an infamous high-handed proceeding which merits the condemnation of every citizen of Oregon, irrespective of his political creed or party affiliations. Charlie Fulton should have learned a lesson from Tom Reed's fate; but he didn't. The republican party of Oregon should have looked upon the wreck of the national organization before embarking in such a foolhardy adventure; but it didn't. Now Fulton and his associates will have to take the consequences. They have dug their grave, and have gone down to well-merited oblivion. Any party which attempts to introduce caesarism into this country is doomed to everlasting perdition."

That settles it, but there are two or three things we wish the Telegram to remember. Throughout the session the democratic members have been loud in their cries for a longer term. When the last day came, in the senate, every republican member was in his seat, as were most of the democrats. On this last day, as can naturally be supposed, there was a great deal of work to be completed. The Durham ballot bill was one of the subjects to be dealt with. The democrats, principally for the reason that the measure was one of the best that has ever been introduced at Salem, opposed its passage bitterly, and were content to let drop every other piece of work on hand and to ignore all other public business in order to prevent its going through, by sneaking out of the senate chamber and breaking the quorum.
President Fulton, determined to finish the work of the session at all hazards, compelled these brilliant statesmen to stand their ground and called for their names. On the technicality that if they did not answer the roll on the vote they were legally not present, these gentlemen sat as dumb as oysters. They would not vote for the bill, they would not vote against it, but they found, much to their astonishment, that they were counted as recording their names against the measure, which was passed.
What man of sense can argue that Mr. Fulton's action, in keeping these men in their seats and compelling them to act

In a manly fashion, and say "Are" or "No," was wrong or autocratic?

We wonder whether Mr. Cleveland recalls the extreme cruelty with which he is treating the old Democratic war-horses. Take the case of Col. Morrison, of Illinois, the pioneer of tariff reform, the man who fought the free trade battles before Mr. Cleveland emerged from Erie county—he has not been regarded as one of the victors. Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, was overthrown by the gentlemen with large pocketbooks and mugwump methods of prostitution. Carter Harrison had something to say in the Illinois election, but where is he at now? Mr. Cleveland was narrowly nominated. Bayard succeeded in breaking the Maryland delegation against Gorman. Mr. Bayard had been consulted, but that seems to be the end of it. The statement is distinct, and to all appearances authoritative, that the two New York Cabinet officers are to be Bissel and Lamont. What have these gentlemen done for the party? What reforms do they personify? Their qualification for office is the personal favor of Mr. Cleveland. There is no personal objection. It is a question of taste, tact, feeling and principle. Can anyone point out an old war-worn Democrat who is to get anything? Note the cruel case of the old war-horse of the Wabash—Isaac Gray. The Indiana delegation, headed by Dan Voorhees, was against Cleveland and for Gray. Whitney's master-stroke was getting the Gray reinforcement, and the vice-presidency was solemnly promised to Gray. So little doubt was there of the certification of this promise that in the great triumphal Cleveland parade the transparencies bore the names of Cleveland and Gray as "the ticket." Gray was defeated, and Stevenson nominated as a slat at Cleveland. Tammany threw the whole vote of New York for Stevenson, because he was an annunciations spokesman. Mr. Gray is not thought of any more for a Cabinet place. The shunting of him on a South American mission is the brightest prospect before him. Mr. Cleveland is not making good Mr. Whitney's word—that is all. It is a painful situation.

The alleged objectionable features of the Durham ballot bill constitute a very small excuse indeed for the Democratic effort to block legislation and for the cry of "Caesarism" raised against President Fulton, because he asserted the right of the majority to legislate. It is a fundamental principle of a government by the people, says the Oregonian, that the majority shall rule, and that the majority of a legislative body shall legislate and be held responsible before the people for what that body does. The idea that the minority in such a body shall dictate legislation is repugnant to Republican principles, and, when put in force is subversive of them. This little flurry in the Oregon senate was a tempest in a very small teapot. The Democratic objections to the bill were not grave enough, even from a purely partisan standpoint, to warrant such revolutionary tactics as were resorted to by the opponents of the bill, while, on the contrary, the bill contains so many improvements upon the present election law, in the interest of honest elections and honest counts, that the friends of purity at the polls should have given it hearty support.

"No period in our history can be indicated when the national fame and influence and the prosperity of the people was greater than now. If the Democratic party will now put into law its platform declarations, our people will be able to bring the discussion to the test of a near contrast; and from that test Republicans do not shrink.—Very sincerely yours,
"BENJAMIN HARRISON."
Mr. Cleveland would do well to cast his eye on the above. It is from the President's letter to the Lincoln birthday banquet in New York.

America's Great Danger

AN ENGLISH COMMENTARY.

Said an eminent English scientist recently: "The danger that confronts the great American people to-day is not the possible adoption of a wrong financial policy for the nation, or the spread of socialism, or the increase of corruption among public men. All these are bad enough, to be sure, but they are nothing compared to the terrible national disease—I had almost said national crime—of overwork. The mad rush for wealth is set at a killing pace, and thousands fall by the way every year."

You are likely to be one of the victims!

How do we know? Because it is the exception to find a man or woman of adult age in perfect health. Nervous Disorders are spreading with fearful rapidity. Among the symptoms are—Backache, Biliouness, Cold Hands and Feet, Dizziness, Hot Flashes, Fluttering Sensation, Fainting, Headache, Hysteria, Irritability of the Heart, Melancholy, Failing Memory, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Short Breath, Sleeplessness, Nervous Dyspepsia, Sexual Debility, Fits, etc.
Rev. C. A. Cameron, pastor First Baptist Church, Yellow Springs, O., writes as follows: "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for the past six months. I find it acts like a charm on the whole nervous system. I have not found its equal in giving immediate relief. Dr. Miles' Little Nerve and Liver Pills only need a trial and they will recommend themselves to be the best pills in the market."

"For five years I have suffered from Nervous Prostration. I was unable to work or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine gave me relief, and one thousand dollars would not cover the good it has done me."—JOHN MINCHER, Youngstown, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is unequalled in curing Nervous Diseases. It contains no opiates or dangerous drugs. Sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.
