

The Daily Astorian. PUBLISHED BY Astorian-Columbia Publishing Company, ASTORIA, OREGON. ASTORIAN BUILDING, - - - CASS STREET

Local weather for the twenty-four hours ending at 6 p. m., yesterday, furnished by the U. S. department of agriculture, weather bureau: Maximum temperature, 44 degrees. Minimum temperature, 25 degrees. Precipitation, .12 inches.

This paper has the largest circulation on the Columbia river. An honest and complete telegraphic report gives a newspaper a right and title to the name.

While the Oregonian is full of laudatory notices of the new cabinet, and the democratic papers of the state course sing their praises every day in the week, let us take a look at the names ourselves.

"Uncle Jerry" Rusk is entitled to an honorary degree in the science of political economy for having said: "While I believe in proper economy in the administration of every department of the government, I do not believe in carrying economy far enough to impair efficiency."

We would respectfully call the attention of the grand jury to the fact that a county official escaped what may have been death yesterday only by a lucky accident. The offices and jail should be remodeled and rebuilt.

Pantocracy is the latest crank production. It proposes to upset everything and to make life worth living to all. Four hours' work each day, at one dollar an hour, is to be given by the government to every adult, and everybody is to have everything they want.

In refusing to issue bonds for the benefit of Wall street, the administration has the people, regardless of politics, behind it. This will be equally true of the coming administration, if it follows the good example.

Statesmen who try to invade the domain of woman's dress have no right to complain when women try to get into politics. "What is sauce for the goose," etc.

Adlai has one good quality which is by no means over plentiful among public men—he knows how to keep quiet when it isn't his turn at the speaking tube.

The Portland Dispatch still craves for a clean sweep of the Sherman bill, and its provisions, and hints that any other measure, no matter of what nature, would be an improvement on it.

of sound finance, and at the same time every profession of the democratic party. It stops the purchase of silver temporarily—the one proper feature so far as it goes—but does it, as we pointed out yesterday, by violating the compact behind more than one hundred millions of currency, dropping from the gold to the silver standard, and resumes the forced coinage of the silver dollar, adding a million a month to the blind law output until the margin on the bullion of difference between the gold and the silver standard is consumed, and then resumes the purchase of silver. This involves a flagrant inflation of nearly thirty millions, and it is to be supplemented by wildcat state currency.

This is democratic financial reform with a vengeance. We are sorry to see that the editorial columns of the Dispatch swery so stupidly from the solid ground of sound finance.

The Brown family has a right to kick. The Smiths have captured a seat in the senate and a cabinet portfolio, and Editor Jones of the St. Louis branch of the Jones family, has been accused in congress of selling the opinions of his paper. If the Browns do not catch on to something before long the old-time alliance of Smith, Jones and Brown will have to be dissolved.

Future generations will look back to the years of President Harrison's administration, and feel proud of the man who guided the ship of state so honorably and so well. His going out is a glorious one, for he has been faithful to the great trust reposed in him by his fellow countrymen. We could give him no higher eulogy than that.

"A fool and his money soon parted" is applicable to the man who paid $500 for 100 front seats on a Washington street stand, to enable himself and his friends to see the inaugural parade.

Statesmen who try to invade the domain of woman's dress have no right to complain when women try to get into politics. "What is sauce for the goose," etc.

Adlai has one good quality which is by no means over plentiful among public men—he knows how to keep quiet when it isn't his turn at the speaking tube.

Good bye, President Harrison. Well done, thou good and faithful servant.
