tice how he squirmed and dodged about? He would not give me an honest answer. He dared not.

Then Mr. Fulton continued: What an unfortunate set of people we are. Always doomed to disappointment. Here is this 'Summer Idyl.' that wonderful emanation from this self-confessed great author's mighty pen. No, just as we think we see the sinuous winding of the rallroad curving around the foothills of the mighty Cascades and sinking from view in the valley of the beautiful Nehalem, just as we think we hear the shrick of the fron horse as he comes thundering along, we fall from the pinnacle of hope and satisfaction down into the deep abyss of dispair. It is always so; always our luck. Just so it is with this Summer Idyl. This wonderful production that was to immortalize us, that was to live in the pages of history, is wrenched from us. It is not written on scrolls, on imperishable parchment, not on tablets of marble or stone, but where? Oh, where? Why, gentlemen of the jury, the author tells us meyer's hall at 7:30 p. m. that it is inscribed in indelible letters on a place that is forever hidden from our gaze. It is written, gentlemen, in no other place than Sidney Dell's knee. Oh, that it were on some other portion of his broad anatomy, where in his evolutions before us, we might behold and enjoy it when contemplating his association with the people around him. And here is the gentleman's book: article. Dell lied when he stated he "Astoria and Flavel,

By Sidney Dell, Because it wouldn't sell,

Twas nearly, etc. "I have shown you that The Astorian had no malice. Mr. Rathom did not even know Dell when he wrote that articlt. Dell lied when he stated he had been interviewed when he had not. Didn't he? He had tried to foist his book on the common council, and they refused to have anything to do with it. Donan's book is to a certain extent overdrawn, but in the main it is true. Dell's statement about it is absolutely false. Is it a good plan for a man who says he is working for the best interests of the city to run down a book that has been purchased and circulated by the city council. Donan's book is readable. It has interesting pictures, and a man picking it up would not put it down till he had read it. Astoria is certainly at the base of the foothills of the Cascade range, but is not 'perched on piles at the foot of the overhanging Cascade mountains.' Nobody ever said it was. What right had Dell, to misdescribe this statement? I ask you if the newspapers don't take up these matters when such falsehoods are sowed broadcast over the country, whose duty is it to do so? As to Mr. Rathom's statements in the second editorial, they simply reiterated what was said in the first article. All he said regarding Dell as an attorney was mentioned in connection with this article. What shall we say of a man who will go into the public press, write circulars, and vilify people as he has done? Is he not a dishonor to an honorable profession? What branch of society would such a man be a credit to? Let us see what his reputation as a lawyer is. All the witnesses have spoken with one voice There is not a single man who has come here and said that Dell has a character of respectability in his profession. Look at the testimony of Judge Elliott. A man who is tottering with age. When he gets up and states what he does, no power in the world could make him say anything but the strict truth. Examine the testimony of Judge Taylor. There is condemnation in everyone's mind of the man who hunts up dusty old records and stirs up old titles just to get a little filthy lucre. Think of the man who would go to another with a proposition to lend money to a client to avoid a disturbance of his title. This man Dell, by his own acknowledgment, offers to pay the costs of men who would not themselves engage in litigation. The supreme court has passed on this kind of conduct, condemned it in the strongest terms, and stated that it is against public policy. It is in other words a crime at common law. It is champerty. He unblushingly says he engages in that business, and will continue to engage in it. A man who will take upon himself to criticise and defame in the public press the supreme court of the state when he loses a case, is a disgrace to the profession to which he belongs. Dell says he carried the election of 1880, owing to these supreme court attacks. What egotism! He thinks the world revolves around him. Think of the monumental, supreme and enormous concelt of the man who says that that election was carried on his proposition. Imagine it. He, and his acts had no more weight bat between two gnats in the air. "Didn't he apologize humbly in this court to Ike Bergman after he had intimated that he had sold his honor and had bartered for $50 his official vote? He thinks to gain the sympathy of the jury by apologising here. Why didn't he do it before? Didn't he lie about Lewis? Why didn't he find out the facts before he tried to hold him up to ridicule before the public? As the Frenchman said, 'It is very great sport to hunt ze tiger, but when ze tiger hunts you it is not so funny!" After in carrying that election than a comon the issues, and after Judge Me-Bride had summed up according to the evidence, the jury were ordered out at 5:30 p. m.

At twenty minutes after midnight Judge McBride ordered the jury into the courtroom again. He asked whether they had reached a verdict.

The foreman replied that there was no prospect of an agreement, and that there had been no change in the ballotting for six hours. The jury stood from further appearance in the case.

It is not yet known what further steps the prosecution intend to take. Court will resume again at 9:30 this morning.
