assertion that the movement would be needed to keep the Democratic party in power. The convention was adjourned.

President, April 11—After the session of the administration, the President stated that the Democratic party was in a state of depression and that the convention was prepared to meet the crisis. The President then called for the voice of the convention to confirm his action. The voice was not heard. President, April 11—After the adjournment of the session, the President said that the Democratic party was in a state of depression and that the convention was prepared to meet the crisis. The President then called for the voice of the convention to confirm his action. The voice was not heard.