ABOUT CANALS.

Some Interesting Statistics Regarding the Probable Success of the Nicaragua Project.

(From the North American Review.) The Suez Canal, with almost a hundred miles of continuous digging, cost about $100,000,000. Of this sum $30,000,000 were wasted in interest, commissions, changes of location and bad management. That canal has now a traffic of 9,000,000 tons annually, and it must be speedily enlarged to accommodate the commerce that is crowding through it to the western coast of the Pacific ocean. The Nicaragua Canal has twenty-nine and a half miles of canal prism, or axial, line.

Of this one-third is very light dredging. The total length of this transit from sea to sea is 169 1-2 miles; of this line 155 1-4 miles is slack water navigation at an elevation of 110 feet above the level of the sea. This small lift is overcome by six locks—three on either side of the lake. The entire cost of the canal ready for use, as estimated by Mr. Menocal, allowing 25 per cent. for contingencies, is $65,084,176.

A board of five other engineers went over Mr. Menocal's measurements and estimates with great care, and out of abundant caution, and not because of any substantial change in his figures, they added to his estimate another 20 per cent. for contingencies, and so changed his estimate as to make the total cost of the canal, ready for service, $87,799,570.

It seems that this may be reasonably accepted as the outside cost of the canal. But, if we run up the conjectural cost to $100,000,000, if built for that sum, must be the most valuable property in the world of its magnitude. The tonnage, annually, can scarcely fall below that of the Suez Canal. It will gradually exceed that amount. If it is two-thirds as great as that which passes through the St. Mary's Canal in the lakes it will equal 9,000,000 tons.

Who does not know that it must be greater than the traffic supplied by so small an area of inland country? A just estimate would be fixed confidently by the most careful and unhesitating persons at 9,000,000 tons per annum, to say nothing of income from passengers, of whom swarms will emigrate to the Pacific Coast. On this estimate we could place the tolls at the rate of $1 per ton and realize $9,000,000 per annum.

Take $3,000,000 of this sum for maintenance of the canal, which will not exceed half that sum; $3,000,000 for interest on the bonded debt, and $3,000,000 for the stockholders, and we will have a result that should excite the cupidity of the grasping speculator. But the true friend of the industrial and commercial people will see in this result a saving to industry and commerce of more than one-half the charges for tonnage that are now paid to the Suez Canal.

If the United States is the owner of $30,000,000 of the $100,000,000 of the stock in this canal, and if it is to cost $100,000,000 to build it, the dividends on that $30,000,000 of stock, employed in a sinking fund and invested in the bonds of the company, would pay the entire cost of construction and the interest of the bonds in less than fifty years.
