As the fishing fleet was on its way home yesterday afternoon, a most beautiful picture was presented. From Sand Island to Tongue Point the bay was dotted here and there with boats hurrying home, while now and then the rays of Old Sol would descend upon the white sails and brighten the scene. When passing Flavel's dock five of the boats had an interesting race, and for several minutes their prows were in a line and their speed equal. The difference in the number of salmon on board soon told, however, and while those that were comparatively light forged ahead, the heavier hearts of the owners of the heavier laden boats served to make them content.

An individual giving his name and address as Frank Trascott, of Portland, Me., amused the passengers on the Ilwaco yesterday morning. He stated that he had walked all the way across the continent, and judging by his appearance the statement was quite true. His pinched features and wan expression lent to the belief that he was half-starved, and the ragged condition of his clothes added strength to this theory. He was dirty and unkempt, and he said he would not wash until he did so in the waters of the Pacific. The trip across the country, he said, took seven months. He further says he is going to write a book of poems, taking for his subject his personal experiences during the last few months of his existence.

There are some rare samples of old coins and medals of unique design in this city. They are the property of Joseph Rippla, one of the assistants in Cooper's. One is a medal nearly of a square shape, and dimensions of 3-1/2 by 1-1/2 inches, its weight being 5-1/2 pounds. On each side of the four corners is stamped the inscription, "Carl XII, King of Sweden, 1713." Mr. Rippla also has a medal stamped during the reign of Alexander the First, of Russia. It was given by that mighty potentate to some of the present owners' ancestors in recognition of their services in building a road of stone through a swamp, a piece of work which had been considered impossible by reason of the nature of the foundation. The road was for a public highway. In the Russian language is an inscription which in English reads: "For labor done intelligently." With this scant praise were the original owners made happy.

ALONG THE WHARVES.

The officers and crew of the R. P. Elmore had an exciting experience during their last trip to Tillamook Bay. When the vessel left this city she had a quantity of freight for Nehalem City, and it was intended to discharge that first. When the bar was approached it was found to be breaking so badly that the channel could not be distinguished. The result was that the steamer got in too close and went ashore on an ebb tide. When the waters receded she was left high and dry. Fortunately there were no passengers on board, and there was no confusion among the members of the crew. The next tide was a foot and a half higher, and an effort was made to get the steamer off. As she was raised by the breakers her engines were kept going, until finally the channel was reached, when she proceeded to Nehalem. After landing the freight there, the Elmore went to Garibaldi, where she was put on the beach for examination and such necessary repairs as could be made there. It was found that one blade had been lost off the propeller, but beyond this and the starting of a little oakum around the deadwood no damage was done. She was properly caulked, and taken off on the next high tide, leaving Tillamook at 5 a. m. and arriving here at 12 m. There were twelve passengers on board and a fair quantity of freight. After discharging here the steamer was beached for repairs at the iron works, and will be ready to proceed to sea about Wednesday next.

The British ship Cabul, 1879 tons, Captain Doyle, arrived in yesterday afternoon, 148 days from London, with general cargo, consigned to Meyer, Wilson & Co. Captain Doyle reports an uneventful passage, and fair weather generally throughout, with the exception of some storms off the Horn. At the equator the Cabul experienced calm weather for some weeks, which accounts for the rather long voyage. She 1960 tons of cement, but is not within 200 tons of being fully laden. This is the second trip of the Cabul to this port. All the members of the crew are well, with the exception of one, who was taken to the hospital as soon as the ship arrived here. The man had eaten scarcely anything for the last two months, it was stated, and was in a very emaciated condition, a hollow cough indicating consumption in an advanced stage.

The pilot schooner sighted the Cabul about 3 p. m., Thursday, 18 miles W NW of Cape Disappointment. About 6:30 p. m. she approached the ship, when the schooner was caught in a tide rip, and would not answer her helm. The result was a collision, the schooner striking the Cabul on the starboard side between the foremast and mainmast, carrying away her jib-boom and head gear and also the fore rigging on the port side. Her rail was also smashed in as she went along the ship's side, as well as the stanchions and bulwarks for a distance of about thirty feet. A pilot was put aboard, and temporary repairs were made. Pilot Doig went aboard the schooner at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and brought her in for repairs. The Cabul was uninjured.
