WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) Washington, June 19, 1893. If there is any one class of government employes who ought to be absolutely secure in the positions they hold, no matter how often or how radical the change in the administration and heads of departments, surely the Union veterans should be that class, particularly into which politics should enter at all. Long ago congress enacted a law stating in the most explicit language that these men should be given preference in all branches of the civil service, but I am sorry to say that this administration has violated that law right along whenever some position, outside of the classified service, which was held by a veteran was wanted for a democrat and not satisfied with that Assistant Secretary Simms, took advantage of the lack of appropriations by the last congress, which made the dismissal of sixty-eight clerks from the General Land Office necessary, to dismiss a number of crippled veterans among them. It was a needless act of cruelty, and it doubtless seemed all the harder to the Union veteran who had left a leg or arm on some battle field to know that he has been discharged from the service of the United States, for which he fought, by an ex-confederate, who at the same time was fighting against

Two of these crippled veterans, with only two legs between them, who were dismissed called upon Assistant Secretary Simms, who himself lost a Every regular subscriber to The leg on the confederate side, and who was once governor of Mississippi, to ask for reinstatement, and if the conversation which was reported to me as having taken place between them really did occur, and I believe it did, the veterans certainly had insult added to the injury that had previously been done them. When they pleaded for reinstatement because of their crippled months will be entitled every ten ask for reinstatement, and if the conby sending us 30 cents (for each set of having taken place between them reon books) in postage stamps of silver, ally did occur, and I believe it did, the These books are complete novels by done them. When they pleaded for restandard authors, each a handsome instatement because of their crippled condition preventing them earning ..mn pages, in a neat attractive cover, livings for their families outside of the government service, Mr. Simms told them that there were many crippled ex-confederates who had to earn their living without employment from the government and without being helped out by pensions form the United States. Your correspondent does not believe in reviving or keeping alive the prejudices of the war, but he does think that the treatment meted out to these Union veterans is an everlasting disgrace to this administration. The son of a confederate officer said of the discharges of Union veterans; "These men gave four of the best of their lives to the preservation of this government, and if I had my way it should be high reason to dismiss one of them."

It is rumored that Mr. Cleveland has concluded to call the extra session of congress earlier than September, but members of the cabinet deny that any change has been made in the program or is likely to be made. The pressure from New York city is particularly strong for an immediate extra session but no one here expects it to meet before September.

The verdict of the coroner's jury

Although the officials at the state Diseases department still maintain a silly air of is the only remedy so sure and certain that mystery about the resignation of Minited and the sure of the control of ister-Paramount Blount, the man who or care, in every case, you have your money achieved more notoriety in one minute, by lowering the American flag in Hawall, than he had been able to get in all his previous life, there is little doubt that he has resigned and that his successor has been selected. He never would have been made Minister at all except to attempt to legalize the illegal acts he performed while acting as "my personal representative," a position unknown to the constitution or laws of the United States. There are reasons for believing that his resignation was not voluntary, but was requested by the administration for several reasons chief of which is its anxiety to crawl out of the awkward position in which Blount's acts, while acting under its carefully prepared instructions, have placed it.

chance to secure standard, high-class The democratic congressmen have forced Postmaster-General Bissell to get down from the high horse upon which he climbed in the early days of the administration, and it no longer requires charges against republican fourth class postmasters to get their places for democrats. The edict has gone forth that all republican postmasters must go, and it is now only a question of how soon Maxwell can make the preparations for the decapitation act. It no longer requires any other endorsement than that of the democratic congressman from the diswill be entitled to these books free of fourth class postmaster. This pleases the democratic congressmen immensely
