THE SIGH OF A REPUBLICAN WHO WANTS TO GET A DEMO-CRATIC OFFICE.

(The following beautiful poem wa wafted into this office yesterday by a wild capary bird.)

The tears stream down my hardened cheek, As I gaze upon the Page,

And read not that for which I seek, A Job as inspector stout and sleek. Nought can my grief assuage. I buttonhole him every day,

And I look upon his brow. put my soul all through my eyes, And taink "I'll surely get the prize, He can't resist me now.' And yet he wont take pity. Lor!

He's a sight too smart for me;

He bends his head and scans me o'er, And says, "I cannot help you, for A democrat I be."
