

ALONG THE WHARVES.

The Elmore goes out today, weather permitting, to Tillamook. She takes with her, twenty tons of cannery supplies, in all about forty tons.

On the Elmore's up trip from Tillamook she brought with her seven tons of butter consigned to Portland, and 600 cases of salmon for Elmore, Sanborn & Co. She had nine passengers.

The Columbia left out at 11:30 a. m. She took with her an assorted cargo, including 800 cases of salmon, one case of seal skins and 10 tons of household goods.

Colonel Pat Donan, versatile and interesting as ever, talking to a party of gentlemen the other day, said: "I came west over the Union Pacific road. People wait about hard times. Judging by the crowded trains, one would fancy everything was booming and the glided goose hung high. Ten or twelve cars in a train, and every coach jammed. Sleepers with from two to four in every section. Dining cars overflowing with patrons. The time from Chicago to Omaha is fully forty miles an hour for every hour of running time. Think of whirling from Lake Michigan to the Pacific ocean in three days and a half. That's as fast as I care to fly till I get my own wings. One skims over the Great American Desert like a flash of greased lightning mixed with alkali dust. The cars are as elegant in all their appointments as those of the Baltimore and Ohio or the New York Central. And do you know that one of the grandest and most exquisite stretches of scenery on any line in the world lies along the first hundred miles of the Union Pacific east of Portland. It is true. With the majestic Columbia river, the Amazon of North America, on one side, and the wide and picturesque Cascade mountains on the other, it is a hundred-and-fifty-mile fly through all the glories and beauties of Fairland. In that short distance, there are over fifty wondrous cataracts, like Multnomah Falls, the Bridal Veil and Latourelle, ranging from two hundred and fifty to twelve hundred feet in dizzy, leaping, foaming height. It is magnificent beyond description or imagination, and only needs the artists and the poets to make it famous as one of the world's fairest picture grounds."
