MOFFETT AND THE SCHOOLS. "One of the heaviest burthens that the taxpayers have to year is their centribution to the support of the public schools, and we are pehaps justified in say machat there is no department of focal government in which there is more waste and extravagance.

The common school system has be come an essential part of republican government. The education of the is an absolute necessity. A knowledge of this fact has reconciled the property-owners to submit cheerfully to the burthen of taxation for school purposes, a condition which has likewise encouraged a wasteful and extravagant appropriation of funds. Evwho crything has to be done on the giltcloow of Goethe's Faust. edge style. On the principle that nothing is too good for the public schools luxuries have been substituted for necessaries. All sorts of new fads and fakes have been introduced, and fancy tard politicians, who are noither fish prices paid for everything from a spellnor fowl, but only unadulterated water ing book to the salaries of teachers rats. and officers."-Evening Telegram.
