

AT IT AGAIN.

Our old acquaintance, the Washington Independent is still firing off great flashes of brilliant thought from its editorial brain. Here are a few of the latest:

"Twenty-nine years ago to-day J. C. Miles, J. B. Brooks, Mr. Yockey, and this editor were on the battle field of Cedar Creek or Belle Grove in the Valley of Virginia, in the hottest of the fight, where brave men went down in death fighting brother against brother to avenge the wrath of politicians for each other."

"Not many noticed the late eclipse at this place owing to the cost of smoked glass and the clouds that obscured the Sun."

"All who have just bills against this office can rest assured that they will not be repudiated it matters not what may come. The people owe us and we have faith in them, and what we owe will be paid when the people pay us, whether demands are made upon us or not. No reasonable person wants more under present circumstances."

"The Lord willing the Cumberland Presbyterian church will hold a series of meetings in the court-house in Pomroy, beginning the first Sunday in November. The ministers of the different churches and all the christians of the community are invited to attend the meetings, assist in the work, and share in the blessings."
