The Home Affairs

Washington, D.C. - The position of a new political party with that battle cry on the side of the tariff, the demand for the extension and strengthening of the Union, the day was devoted to the discussion of the different states. There was a great deal of talk on the subject of the Union's strength and the necessity of a reformation of the party. The same questions were asked and discussed, as always, whether the Union was strong enough to support the new party. The day was devoted to the discussion of the different states.
