If an inquiry is held into the loss of the Port Yarrack, says Fairplay, the question of the age and number of the sails on board when she left on the homeward voyage will no doubt be gone into, as the long passage of the ship and subsequent disaster appear to have been due in a great measure to the loss of sails on the passage.

The British ship City of York, now at Sunderland, Eng., from this port, reports that on November 17 last, when in the Pacific ocean, the boatswain, Jas. M. Emery, fell overboard and was drowned. Owing to the galeous weather prevailing at the time all efforts to save him proved futile. Deceased had been an apprentice on board, but on completing his apprenticeship he was made boatswain. Capt. Jones further reports having passed, on December 16, in the South Atlantic, a number of large icebergs.

There is but one marine school and training ship for fitting young men for the capacity of able seamen and to become officers of the merchant marine in the United States, and that is the St. Mary's, operated in connection with the public school system of New York. This boat was put into service in 1884, and since that time 1,500 young seamen have been educated and received certificates of graduation. Eighty per cent of this number have gone to sea, and many are now occupying positions of trust on shipboard. This record may be said to have established the reputation of the school as a success, and should be an inducement to institute a similar school on this coast.

A Montana man has invented a boat for navigation on the Misocola and other mountain rivers. The boat is 17 feet long and four feet in the beam. Attached to the stern is a paddle-wheel, hung from a frame, which can be raised or lowered as the boat is in shallow or deep water. Arising in a hurry on the following morning she grabbed the horse shoe instead of her teeth and adjusted it in her mouth, and wore it several hours before she discovered her error.

The bureau of navigation has issued the following circular to collectors of customs and others: "It is represented to this bureau that the practice of bestowing the same name upon different vessels leads to confusion and annoyance in the identification of vessels, the disadvantage frequently of the owners and masters of vessels, charterers, compilers of shipping news, underwriters and others who have to do with shipping. The matter is one in which the owners and masters of vessels and those directly interested in shipping are most concerned, and their voluntary action can correct the practice referred to more expeditiously and satisfactorily than statute. In first applications for marine documents in which it is desired to bestow upon a vessel a name already borne by one or more vessels of the same port or neighboring ports, collectors of customs are requested to bring this fact to the notice of the applicant, to the end that the duplication of the names may be checked by the voluntary action of those most concerned."

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Commenting upon the increasing number of secret societies and organizations, the Dayton Chronicle says: "The thought is suggesting itself to a great many people that Dayton has rather overdone the thing in the matter of organizations, social, religious, benevolent, musical, literary, military and otherwise. To such an extent has this been carried that there are few nights in the week that all the members of a household gather about the evening lamp in an unbroken circle. But even it is not a night out, then it is not a night in."

night out, then brother Den's, then sister Arabella's. By this time the calendar indicates that it is both papa and ma's light out. There is but one inevitable tendency to all this, need we add, and that is to destroy the unity of the family and slowly but surely undermine the household. Now, you sensible people of Dayton, if you wish to deserve a reputation for good sense, face about in this matter and endeavor to strike the happy medium between too much organization and no organization at all."

MR. RAYMOND'S DEATH.

The Aged Pioneer Passed Away Suddenly on Saturday Afternoon.

The death of W. W. Raymond occurred at his residence near Skidnapon on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Walker, who was attending him, was present when the deceased passed away. Mr. Raymond apparently recognized the doctor when the latter entered the room and showed no indication of the near approach of death. While Dr. Walker was giving instructions to the attendants, Mr. Raymond had another apoplectic stroke, and ten minutes later was dead. Dr. Walker states he never knew of a case where death was so sudden.

Mr. Raymond was in his 79th year, and was a pioneer of 1846, having belonged to the "Mission Family." The funeral services will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church at Skidnapon today.

The steamer will leave Fisher Bros' dock at 1 p. m. All friends of the deceased are invited.

THE UNION GOSPEL MEETINGS.

The Y. M. C. A. hall was hardly large enough for the audience that came to hear Evangelist Ford last night. His text was Matt. xvi, 26: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He said in part: "Men sell their souls for the trifling things of this world. The devil bids with some worthless thing that will prove to be of more injury to us than good. The so-called little sins are but stepping-stones to ruin. Many seek happiness in having a 'good time with the boys,' and often pay very dearly for it; but the only truly happy life is the devoted Christian's."

These meetings begin every night at 7:30. There is a half-hour's song service before the regular service. Everybody is cordially invited.

INTERESTING TO SETTLERS.

The general land department at Washington has made very stringent rules regarding the quantity of pine that settlers have a right to cut before they prove up. One homesteader in the vicinity of Ashland recently made a request that he be allowed to cut and dispose of 100,000 feet of burned pine on his section. He accompanied his application with an affidavit that he was very poor, and that his house, with all his possessions, had been destroyed by forest fire. The recent decision received refuses this man's request, and further declares that settlers can only cut what is necessary for clearing and improvement purposes, and until they receive their final proof they have no right to cut pine for the purpose of selling it, no matter how small the amount.—Mississippi Valley Lumberman.
