Henry Ward Beecher

Said of the Strawberry, "God doubtless might have made a better berry but it was doubtful if he ever had." So we say of our Easter Cards and novelties, "somebody might possibly have better, but it was very doubtful if any body about here ever has. If they have, the stock has never put in an appearance in Astoria and the people who have examined ours know this to be a fact." Added to this fact comes the further beauty of it, there is none sold for so little money, talk or no talk.

QUIETNESS RESTORED

Governor Waite Conscions of His Own Foolishness.

GLAD TO EFFECT A COMPROMISE

Militia Order to Be in Readiness to Proceed to Cripple Creek at a Moments Notice.

Denver, March 17, 10 A. M.—The first regiment of militia have been notified to assemble at the armory at once and to hold themselves in readiness to go to Cripple Creek at a moment's notice. Everything is quiet here this morning, and people are awaiting the decision of the governor on the question of submitting the matters in dispute to the supreme court. It is pretty definitely known that he will be glad to make a compromise, and he only hesitates for fear of the loss of his official dignity. It is believed he will make the necessary concession some time during the day.

JOINTS MUST CLOSE.

Huron Ladies Begin a Crusade Against Evils.

Huron, S. D., March 17.—The crusade against saloons and houses of ill-repute has begun here. A delegation of ladies waited on Mayor Myers, requesting that he close places where they claimed that liquor was being sold, and other places where prostitutes were kept. He asked them if they had evidence against any particular place. Their answer was, "No, they had simply heard about these places, and requested him to close them up." The mayor told the ladies if they would secure evidence he would close the places.

The ladies went to the Methodist church, where a crusade meeting was being held, and reported that Myers would not close the places.

A blind pig and beer store room were closed by an injunction given out by Attorney Cramer, from Aberdeen.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY.

Richmond, Va., March 17.—An oyster war has broken out. The police schooner Tangier was attacked by oyster pirates from the shores of Smith's Island this morning, 25 or 30 Marylanders performing a fusillade with repeating rifles, and firing 500 shots or more, a number striking the schooner. The schooner replied with rifles, then with cannon, one or more cannon shots striking the house from which the Marylanders were firing. At last accounts the pirates were throwing up breastworks.

IN A HAZARDOUS POSITION.

New York, March 17.—The steamer Vega, from Portuguese ports, reports that the bark Montgomery Castle was boarded by a huge wave near the Azores, and that all three officers and seven men were washed away and drowned. The men left on board do not understand navigation and have no nautical instruments. It is feared the vessel will be wrecked.

WILSON ON THE WARPATH.

Washington, March 17.—Representative Wilson, of Washington, is making inquiries as to the contract which the treasury department is said to have made with a British coal company for supplying $100,000 worth of coal to the United States vessels which will patrol Bering sea. If the report is true he will make a vigorous protest.

AN EXTENSIVE WORK.

Washington, March 17.—Should the Bland seigniorage bill, which has been passed by both houses, become a law, the coinage of $55,000,000 of silver billion will have to be done at the mints of Philadelphia, San Francisco and New Orleans, the only mints in operation. The whole time necessary to coin the seigniorage is approximately two years and two months.

TOO HIGH UP.

Baker City, March 17.—The hoisting of a large green streamer and the placing thereunder of the stars and stripes this morning by Henry Rust on the flagstaff in front of Rust's opera house roused the indignation of a large number of citizens. The mayor instructed the chief of police to haul down the green streamer and the crowd dispersed.

COMING TO AN AGREEMENT.

Omaha, March 17.—The Union Pacific employes, notwithstanding their protestations that they would never consent, this morning went into a secret session with President Clarke to take up the new wage schedule promulgated by that road. The telegraphers were given the first hearing. It is believed that three days will be consumed in presenting their side. The men have calmed down since yesterday, and now say they believe the conference will terminate satisfactorily.

THEY DON'T BELIEVE THE STORY.

Chicago, March 17.—Wheat speculators here do not credit the story that Ed. Partridge is running a corner in that cereal in San Francisco, first, because he knows nothing of the wheat markets outside of Chicago, and, second, because it is contrary to his nature to be anything except a bear.

A SCHOONER ON THE BEACH.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—A special from Redondo says: It blew great guns at Redondo this morning and the schooner Maria Smith went ashore a little south of Casino. The schooner is now lying high and dry on the beach, very little damaged. She was laden with lumber.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

Gloucester, Mass., March 17.—Fire is raging in the best portion of this city. At 3:15 p. m. it had attained such headway that the local fire department were unable to cope with it. The loss cannot fall short of $150,000.

WILL NOT DISTURB THE TAX.

Washington, March 17.—The senate finance committee today decided to change the internal revenue tobacco schedule so as to restore the provisions of the present law concerning cigars and cigarettes.

SHOT A MINISTER.

Whittier, Cal., March 17.—The Rev. Andrew Carson early this morning had a hand-to-hand struggle with a burglar. Carson was shot three times and seriously wounded. The burglar afterwards stole a horse and escaped.

MONTANA'S COLLECTORSHIP.

Washington, March 17.—The presence here of D. G. Browne, collector of customs for Montana and Idaho, opens the contest concerning his confirmation, which has been in progress for a year.

HOW THE BEEF-EATERS TREAT A HERO.

A workman, earning very small wages, and having a wife and family to keep, when engaged one day 20 miles from his home, saw a woman with a baby in her arms throw herself into the river. He waded across a muddy dyke, dived in after her and rescued the pair with some difficulty. Up to the present these have been the rewards of his heroism: First, he had to walk three miles before he found any one who would let him come in and go to bed while his clothes were dried. Secondly, he was compelled to attend at Rochester police court next day, when he says he was ordered about by the police, treated as only one degree removed from a criminal, and dismissed without payment, to walk eight miles to Gravesend, where he was temporarily stopping. Thirdly, he is detained at Gravesend while the would-be suicide is under remand. Finally, he is reduced to destitution, and his family at home are in the same position, by the loss of time and employment. Whether he will eventually be fined or imprisoned or merely allowed to betake himself with his family to the workhouse, remains to be seen. Possibly this is all done with a view of discouraging those who would interfere with the suicidal intentions of their neighbors. On no other grounds can it be justified.

PRIVILEGES OF MAIDS OF HONOR.

The eight unmarried ladies who hold office as the queen's maids of honor have some privileges. They are given the prefix of "honorable," and, on marrying, receive from the queen the gift of $5,000. One or two maids of honor reside for a fortnight at a time at Windsor or Osborne, but her majesty seldom takes more than one to Scotland. The distinctive badge worn by the maids of honor is a bow of scarlet ribbon on the shoulder, while the ladies in waiting wear a white bow, with the queen's cameo portrait. The dowry of a maid of honor has been given for at least 150 years, but is according to her majesty's pleasure, and in 1863 it was refused one lady who engaged herself in marriage without the consent of her royal mistress.

A SECOND CHALLENGE.

The following communication has been received:

Astoria, Ore., March 17, 1894.
To the Editor of The Astorian—Dear Sir: As I see, Dr. Bushong ignores my challenge in this morning's Astorian, presumably because I did not sign my name to it, I hereby repeat it, and ask the doctor to kindly prove his assertion that the modern infidels are the intellectual pigmies of the day, and that all the greatest and bravest men profess Christ as their saviour. As I said before, if this is the truth it ought not to be hidden under a bushel. It is a bold assertion, and will take so much better among the people if proven. Therefore, let us hear from you, doctor. Respectfully,
ED. LUND.

WARNING TO HAZERS

A Bill Defining Hazing As a Criminal Offense.

RESULT OF CORNELL OUTRAGE

Senator Coggshell of New York Denounces the College Authorities.

Albany, N. Y., March 17.—The senate committee on judiciary, without a dissenting vote, agreed today to report Senator Coggshell's bill defining hazing as a criminal offense. The bill was introduced just after the Cornell affair, and Senator Coggshell, in asking that the bill be reported, said: "If there is any one thing that should hasten this bill through it is the fact that the authorities, the people and the college officials at Ithaca seem disposed to hush up the late outrage by Cornell students and let the culprits go. The ring-leaders in that affair are no less murderers, and no better creatures than the men who shot down republicans at the city polls."

WORTHLESS CERTIFICATES.

A New Swindling Scheme Which Has Been Successfully Worked.

Saloonkeepers in Tacoma and other northwestern cities are said to have been swindled out of thousands of dollars during the winter by purchasing worthless warehouse certificates. A wholesale liquor dealer, who has been investigating the matter, says:

"There has been a whiskey agent in Tacoma for the last few days who has been offering for sale what are claimed to be warehouse certificates for whiskey. The individual in question represents himself as one of the proprietors of a Kentucky distillery. The fact is that there is no company in existence operating a distillery under the name he advertises. Furthermore, the papers which are offered as warehouse certificates are absolutely worthless and do not transfer to the purchaser any title to the goods.

"No one purchasing such certificates can get possession of the whiskey until the goods are paid for; nor can the whiskey be taken out of bond until sufficient money to pay all government, state and county taxes and storage, has been forwarded to the holder of the original warehouse certificates.

"This fake has been carried on more or less successfully all over the United States, and the unfortunate victims of these certificates only learn how thoroughly they have been duped when they try to get possession of the whiskey. Steps have been taken in Kentucky to enact laws which will stop this practice, and it is hoped by liquor dealers that it will be done.

"All genuine warehouse certificates for whiskey are signed by the United States gauger, and are issued according to the laws of the United States, and the state in which the goods are bonded, governing the duties of warehousemen. Genuine certificates give possession of the goods in bond to the person or persons named on the face of the paper, and the certificates are negotiable, whereas the certificates I refer to give the innocent purchaser no right to the possession of the goods until he has fully paid up the exorbitant price asked, with all the interest and costs piled upon it. He cannot well avoid these heavy expenses after once signing the contract to purchase of agents doing business in this manner.

"These agents catch the unwary saloon-keepers, many of whom are not familiar with the manner in which whiskey is stored in bonded warehouses and sold by means of warehouse certificates bearing the government stamp and the signature of government officers.

"When whiskey is distilled it is placed in warehouses and government certificates issued therefor representing lots of five barrels or more. These certificates are sold by the distillers and entitle the purchaser to the whiskey after paying the government charges. These bogus certificates sold out here are not original, but only duplicate certificates. It is on this point that the innocent purchaser is first fooled. He is required to pay $25 or more down, and later he must go ahead and buy the goods or lose all that he has paid on them."

Inquiry fails to elicit any information about such operations in the region of the Columbia river, but it will be as well for local dealers to keep a sharp lookout.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLES.

The trouble on the four-masted bark Hawaiian Isles, an account of which was obtained by an Astorian representative from Capt. Kustel last evening, seems to have been that Mr. Nicolls, the mate, was a little hasty with the men while they were working in the rain the day before leaving Portland. Three or four of the sailors got to blows with him, and Nicolls got rather the worst of it. To add to his trouble, the second mate stood and looked on. The captain at that time was absent, but coming aboard about 4 p. m., and hearing of the disturbance, he promptly discharged the second mate. The first mate wished him to discharge about half of the crew also, but Capt. Kustel, having already engaged a towboat to take him down the river, and not wishing to delay the ship, would not do so. On reaching this city yesterday he discharged the mate, at his own request, as he would not go to sea with the present crew. The captain has telegraphed to San Francisco for another mate and second mate, and when they arrive the vessel will at once proceed to sea. The Hawaiian Isles is a very finely fitted-up ship. This is especially noticeable in the finish of her cabin, which wears a very homelike aspect. The ship also has several modern improvements, including a patent governor for the steering gear, with two pistons cushioned with glycerine, which prevents the jerking of the rudder, and also keeps the wheel from throwing a man and crippling him, an accident that often happens on other ships. She also has a boiler and engine for hoisting cargo, and an engine for hoisting the anchor, which does its work in about 15 minutes on the usual length of cable—35 fathoms.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Emerald Ribbon Seen in All Quarters Yesterday.

St. Patrick's day passed off quietly yesterday, and every Irishman, and pretty nearly everybody who wasn't, sported the refreshing green of that far-famed ale. The emerald ribbon indeed seemed to be everywhere. A prominent democratic candidate for everything going wore it manfully on his bosom, and winked gaily at a prominent republican candidate for everything going, when he saw the emblem occupying a prominent spot on that gentleman's breast. A deadly feud that has been in existence for three weeks between a couple of elderly individuals who walk along the water front and talk about the weather, was dispelled into thin air in about three minutes when each saw the other gay with a bunch of flaring silk. The Stutz band paraded the principal thoroughfares with green literally all over them, from the baton that beat the big drum to the manager's aristocratic tie. It shone (in the form of a four-leaved clover) on the waistcoat of a staid banker, and gleamed like the headlight of a locomotive round the high Gladstone collar of the editor of the Herald. An Israelite, with a decidedly German name and a still more decided Dutch accent, sported a dainty shred of it in his buttonhole, and stoutly informed all inquirers, with a gravity like a mule, that he was a lineal descendant of the Passmore of Westmeath. Several Fenian plots were hatched in broad daylight, and consummated with a "thin-bieful" of pure Irish barley extract. The culminating event of the day was a heartfelt outpouring of song from the nightingale throat of a well known "Paddy, from Cork." The chorus of which, saith deponent, ran in this wise:

THE WIRES DOWN.

A break occurred in the Western Union wire between this city and Portland last evening, and in consequence no dispatches were received, with the exception of The Astorian's afternoon report.
