

ABOUT THE CITY.

The city council meets this evening. The George W. Elder sailed Sunday for San Francisco. The barkentine Catharine Sudden left up for Portland on Sunday. The meeting last night at the Y. M. C. A. hall was well attended and enthusiastic. Services begin tonight at 7:30. The British ship Yarna, hence with grain for Havre, was spoken in latitude 52 south, longitude 57 west, on January 9. The steamers Dwyer, Electric, Sea Foam and Queen were inspected yesterday by inspectors of Hulls and Boilers Edwards and McDermott. The sale of fishing gear at Leinenweber's cannery, advertised to take place at 2 p. m. yesterday, was postponed until 2 o'clock this afternoon. The Oregon team of football players left Portland last evening for San Francisco, where they will play in the interstate matches at the midwinter fair.

Opening days at the new millinery store, 474 Third street, will be tomorrow and Thursday, the 21st and 22d inst.

HOLY WEEK.

Today is the third day in Holy Week, and the services during these last seven days of Passion-tide are more than usually impressive and interesting at all Episcopal churches. On Good Friday, which is the last Friday in Lent, is the most solemn of all fasts. On this day the altar is entirely stripped of its hangings and its ornaments, including the cross. Holy communion is not celebrated on this day, or on Easter eve, before noon. The services consist of a series of addresses, or meditations (with Passion hymns) on the seven last words from the cross. This latter service lasts from noon to 3 p. m., and is called the service of "Three Hours' Agony." The music for Easter Sunday is generally rehearsed for some time previous, and every churchman is bound by the prayer-book to communicate at Easter, and twice, at least, in the year besides.

THE SALMON BUSINESS.

Opinions that the Columbia River Pack Will Be a Large One. The Herald of Trade, of San Francisco, has the following in reference to the salmon business: "Active preparations are being made for the season in Alaska, British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. Some think that the pack on the Columbia river will be large. This opinion is grounded on the four-year-run theory. So far as we can learn the packers on the Columbia will not agree on a combination similar to the Alaska Packers' Association. This is to be regretted for the good of the trade, for it would give more stability to prices and be the means of putting full-weight goods on the market, besides more regularity in quality. Underhanded methods pursued by some of the Columbia river packers have reflected against the industry. The Alaska Packers' Association's business methods are forcing Alaska salmon into consumption, and consumers are taking kindly to the goods as witnessed in the large distributive sales. "The London Grocers' Gazette, February 24, says: 'The demand continues fair. Buyers appear to be holding off somewhat in the hope that when the bulk of the new pack comes to hand, they may be able to supply their wants on better terms than are now being offered. The next arrival of British Columbia is not expected to be here in time for delivery before the middle of May, and the quantity then expected is not being offered under current ruling prices.'"

ROBBED AND BEATEN.

A Half-Breed's Narrow Escape From Being Murdered. At an early hour Sunday morning a half-breed Indian from Brooklyn was robbed near Kearney's cooper shop, and knocked overboard. About 4 o'clock John McCann was awakened by loud cries for help, and proceeding in the direction from which the cries came saw a man in the water clinging to one of the piles. With the assistance of Mr. Lucas, Mr. McCann procured a boat and rescued the intended victim, after considerable difficulty. After being warned the half-breed went down town. His statement of the affair was that he was accosted by two men near where the assault was made, and asked for his money. He told them he would treat if they left him alone, but he had barely spoken when he was struck in the face with a weapon of some sort and knocked overboard. His coat and vest were found near where the assault took place, and from the quantity of blood on the vest, and the fact that it was not on the owner's person, it is supposed the half-breed's memory of how the affair happened is somewhat clouded, and that the robbers took the coat and vest off in order to make a search for what money might be in the pockets. The amount they secured was only $3, the half-breed stated.

There is no risk taken by joining Hill's lot clubs. Everybody gets the full value of their money. Miss McInae will display a large and choice selection of the newest styles in spring millinery on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

FRANK BATES' BURIAL.

Contradiction of the Story That He Was Buried Alive. The following communication will be found self-explanatory: Ilwaco, March 18, 1894. Editor Astorian: With a proverbial regard for truth, and with a morbid brutality of imagination that would excite the envy of the author of a dime novel, the Budget gives the harrowing details of the sight which greeted the eyes of the friends of the late Frank Bates, on disintering his body for shipment east. Either the Budget or its informant wilfully lied. The body never was exhumed. Mr. Bates died suddenly, from heart clot, when he was apparently recovering from an attack of pneumonia. "The life-like appearance common to all forms of sudden death was remarked by a number of people. I made a thorough examination, both with a stethoscope and a thermometer, the most infallible methods known to medical science. Dr. Parks also certified as to the fact and cause of death. The family of the late Mr. Bates telegraphed to place the body in a receiving vault, pending further instructions from them. This could not be done. They were advised of the fact of burial. They never requested the body to be sent east, and it now rests where placed by loving friends in the Ilwaco cemetery, awaiting the last call. The whole story has evidently been gotten up by some morbid mind, soaked in the depravity of sensational literature. Sincerely, W. C. BELT, M. D.
