DEMOCRATIC INTENTIONS.

Senator Voorhees' recent speech in opening the tariff debate in the senate is interesting to the great army of the unemployed as indicating what may be expected if the Democracy is continued.

The Wilson bill, with its protection for the great trusts, falls considerably short of the Democratic platform, and Mr. Voorhees is honest enough to confess it. He declared distinctly that the Wilson bill is not a free trade one, but merely a step in the direction of the total elimination of the protective idea from our tariff laws. The policy of the last thirty years "cannot be annihilated by a single blow," says Senator Voorhees, but the pending bill "Is a long stride, though not a final one, to describe the approaching day of a full at hand: taken as directed will prevent tain control of the government, they will pass another tariff bill, based or will pass another tariff bill, based or purely (free | trade | lines without an atom of protection in it. PAINS AND ACHES.

A SAD PICTURE.

But forewarned is forearmed. The free trade delusions of 1892 have been thattered by the practical realities of 1893 and 1894, and the country has bad more than it wants of Democratic free trade. The only way to remedy the distress is to retire the tariff smashers to private life and elect a congress and a president friendly to American industries and American workingmen.

-Pittsburg Letter. The Sisters McBeth. Among the many persons long connected with work among the Indians few have been known more widely or honored more highly than the two sisters, Misses Sue L. and Kate McBeth, and the recent death of the former has come as a personal loss to a great many. Of Scottish ancestry and training, Miss McBeth was remarkable for her familiarity with the Scriptures and her comprehension of the religious truth. But scarcely less marked was her ability to so present the truth as to make it plain and pungent. She was of fragile and delicate constitution, but her prodigious energy enabled her to accomplish an enormous amount of work.—Philadel-phia Ledger.

Beauty In Two Stirrups.

One of the most charming girls in the West Chester Normal school, Miss Ella Darlington, who has yet to celebrate her twentieth birthday, amazed the staid matrons of this town, but delighted their manly relatives today, by donning a bifurcated skirt and galloping along the main streets astride a horse. Miss Darlington is a leader in gymnastic sports. She sat her horse today in fine fashion, using a man's saddle. "Shocking!" exclaimed many a spinster as the rosy cheeked damsel dashed by. All the men rushed out to see the plucky maiden, and many were the praises uttered.—Philadelphia Record.

Miss Grace D. Ives is a young woman of 25 who carries on a bookbinding business in New York. Recently her lease ran out, and she made a verbal agreement to remain as a monthly tenant. The landlord, however, rented the place to a man who undertook to take possession by force. He brought assistants, including a dozen longshoremen. Misa Ives wurned them all, held her ground, saw doors broken in and her property damaged and has now recovered damages, including a sum for trespass. Evidently she understands that business is business.-New York Press.

The Irish Girl Lawyer. Miss Egan, the Irish girl lawyer, who lately obtained the degree of LL. B. in the Royal university, Dublin, was born in 1868 and received her early education at home. She studied for two years at a school in Coleraine, and in her sixteenth year entered the Alexandria college, Dublin, where she held the Skinner's senior scholarship in 1888 and graduated at the Royal aniversity in 1891. In 1892 Miss Egan passed the first examination in law and took first place with first honors and prize, and in June, 1893, obtained the degree of LL. B.
