Capt. Hallock claims that The Astorian did injustice in yesterday's issue to the family that has been harboring the boy who was said to have been stepping on the hills and docks lately. Capt. Hallock says the boy is 14 years old, though he looks much younger; that he is as shrewd as a boy of 18, and that the reason he had been punished was because he would not come in at night before 11 or 12 o'clock, and that the fact of the matter is, the lad had not received the punishment he really deserved. As an officer he knows him well, and is pleased to hear that the boy has been taken charge of by Capt. Woods, and he is certain that he will now be trained instead of petted.

ADJOURNED YESTERDAY

Fenton and a number of others. After considerable discussion the obnoxious document was laid on the table and the convention proceeded to select a place for holding the next convention.

Flagg, of Marion, presented the name of Salem, giving a number of reasons for his choice, but when he sat down a Union county delegate made a strong speech showing that for geographical reasons Portland was the only place in the state that was easy of access for the greatest number of delegates.

D'Arcy came to the rescue for his bullfight, and in glowing terms predicted that if the convention was held at Salem, Marion county would certainly be rescued from the chains of slavery in which the Republican party now held her. He dwelt at length on the beauties of nature, etc., around the place, and when he sat down Ferguson, of Yamhill, arose and said that he didn't believe it would be best to go to such a place, for that beautiful air and those beautiful surroundings seemed to be making Republicans out of the people there.

Mr. Kelly, of Multnomah, asked if there was any danger of Salem getting out an injunction in case Portland secured the convention.

Mr. Millinix spoke in favor of Salem, and a Klamath county man had the hardihood to present the name of Klamath Falls. A ballot was finally reached, and the result showed 132 for Portland, 90 for Salem and 1 for Klamath Falls. Baker, Benton, Crook, Gilliam, Josephine, Klamath, Lake, Lane, Malheur, Morrow, Multnomah, Sherman, Umatilla, Union, Wallowa and Wasco were sold for Portland, and Clatsop, Columbia, Coos, Curry, Grant, Harney, Jackson, Marion, Polk, Tillamook and Washington were sold for Salem. The others were divided.

Cox, in presenting the 30 votes of Multnomah, raised a laugh by announcing that at last Multnomah was united on a proposition.

A number of resolutions were then passed, thanking the different committees, the citizens of Astoria, the chairmen, members of the press and others. The convention then adjourned, apparently well satisfied with the result of their labors.

THE TRIP TO THE JETTY.

Yesterday's weather made it a nasty day for the visiting delegates to accept the hospitality of Captain Gregory by taking a trip on the steamer Manzanita down the river as far as the jetty, but when the hour of departure came there was a boat load ready and anxious for the ride. At 1 o'clock prompt the steamer cleared the wharf while Utzinger's hand discoursed "Good Bye My Lover, Good Bye."

The occupants of the canneries and factories facing the river bid good cheer to the excursionists by the waving of handkerchiefs and an occasional hurrah for Galloway; and even the sea gulls were thicker than usual, as though they were surveying the crowd with the hope that they, too, might have an opportunity to help amuse the strangers. They hovered over the steamer for some distance down the river, attracting the attention of all on board by their graceful swoops and circlings, and one that seemed to be the boss sea gull of all came down over their protector from Linn county, the Hon. "Jeff" Myers, who had labored so hard while in the legislature for the passage of the bill for their protection, and gave him the right hand of fellowship—yes, gave it to him twice. Mr. Myers did not like the recognition, and declares he will never rest until he has that bill repealed. No one had prepared for such a scene, and no one had really expected it, but ere the steamer had reached the jetty, quite a number of the visitors possessed "that tired feeling," while several of the ladies on board would have pushed the band in the river if looks could have accomplished that feat, for playing "Home, Sweet Home." J. J. Kelly kept his sea legs very well, and when not urging H. W. McGuire to acknowledge to the crowd that for once "he had enough," Mr. Kelly was proving to the county delegates that he was as young as any man on board. He took off his specs, and while the band played the right air he performed a jig that would have won applause at Donnybrook a f'r.

Capt. Gregory's heart was as light as a feather, and calling up First Officer Willson to take the watch, he went down and joined the visitors with so much vim that they wondered how they had got along so well without him before. If the captain had charge of a passenger steamer he would surely control the passenger traffic on his route by his own unaided efforts. It was after 4 o'clock when the Manzanita turned her bow up the river on the return to Astoria, but before the wharf was reached a meeting of the excursionists was held and C. Trenchard, Ira Campbell, of Eugene City, and Sheriff Smith were deputized to wait on P. H. D'Arcy and request that he thank Capt. Gregory and his crew for the kindness and attention shown them while guests of the boat. This Mr. D'Arcy did in a graceful little speech, just as the steamer was being tied up at the wharf. It is safe to say that a number of the visitors from the interior counties were more impressed with the importance and possibilities of the Columbia river by this trip than they could have been by a dozen long-winded speeches.

The Astorian also returns "thanks" to Capt. Gregory and his crew for the kindness shown its representative, and
