The Astorian guarantees to its subscribers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

Advertising rates can be obtained on application to the business manager.

This paper is in possession of all the telegraph franchises, and is the only paper on the Columbia river that publishes genuine dispatches.

The Daily Astorian's circulation is five times as great as that of the combined circulation of the other daily papers of Astoria.

The Weekly Astorian, the third oldest weekly in the state of Oregon, has, next to the Portland Oregonian, the largest weekly circulation in the state.

Subscribers to the Astorian are requested to notify this office, without loss of time, immediately they fail to receive their daily paper, or when they do not get it at the usual hour. By doing this they will enable the manager to place the blame on the proper parties and to insure a speedy remedy.

Handley & Hans are our Portland agents and copies of the Astorian can be had every morning at their stand on First street.

PORTLAND'S AWAKENING.

The report that some of the most prominent business men in the flooded district at Portland are seriously considering the propriety of removing to Astoria, is gratifying evidence that this great and unparalleled disaster will go down to history as an unmix'd evil. It may be that only through some such violent disturbance could the people of Portland have been aroused to an appreciative sense of her commercial predicament. Like the character in Bunyan's famous allegory, the city of Portland has wasted her energies on unattainable and unworthy objects, far beneath the dignity and possibilities of her position, to the utter neglect of the greater and grander realizations which might have been hers for the mere recognition. Notwithstanding her gradually diminishing trade for years past, and the remarkable growth at her expense of other cities, she has nursed the delusion that all that was wanting to enable her to hold and maintain her old time supremacy was to keep down the town of Astoria. To this end she has become notorious the state over for an unfair and fatuous policy of counteracting and rendering unavailing, so far as she had the power, every vain effort put forth by her supposed rival to attract attention to the natural advantages of its surroundings. Like all other evil-doers, she has received an unlooked for reward, and while stubbornly and persistently keeping her face towards the sea, she has failed to note the operations of real and formidable enemies in her rear. The result is that the vast territory northward and eastward, and naturally tributary to her, has been invaded by the towns on Puget Sound, and a great trade which might have been utilized to her own and Astoria's advantage has been slowly, but surely, cut off and diverted. Fortunately, it is not yet too late to retrieve some of these lost opportunities. It should be Portland's cue to aid—rather than retard—the development of Astoria's commanding natural advantages. If some of her business men would come to Astoria, with their enterprise and money, a large portion of the trade now passing the mouth of the Columbia could be saved for the mutual benefit of both places. There is no hope for Portland in the race with Tacoma and Seattle, except by a combination with Astoria. With Astoria the terminus of deep water, and the Upper Columbia open to steamboat navigation, Portland's position as the great distributing depot of the northwest would be impregnable, and between the two cities the entire incoming and outgoing trade of this whole region could be controlled for many years to come.

The paper read by Mayor Kinney at the meeting of the council Tuesday evening is a suggestion in the right direction. The committee appointed is a good one, and by a strong and united effort the proposition to call the attention of congress to the necessity for taking some action to regulate and preserve the salmon fisheries will undoubtedly succeed before the close of the present session. As was pointed out in the Astorian some days ago, nothing short of the interference of the general government will accomplish the desired object. It is to be hoped the matter will not be allowed to sleep, but that it will be pushed vigorously and without delay.

There is every indication, judging from the press dispatches of last night, that the condition which will confront Mr. Cleveland's administration in a few days will be such a deficiency in the treasury gold reserve as will send that metal to a premium. From a position among the leading credit nations of the world, when Mr. Cleveland went into office, the United States has actually degenerated to a point where Mr. Carlisle is afraid to offer another bond issue for fear he would find no takers among our own people.

The Civil Service Reform Association has determined to erect a memorial to the late George William Curtis, and from the character of the men having the matter in charge we may be assured that the work will be pushed with all possible expedition. Mr. Curtis was in the front rank of American men of letters, and it is eminently fitting that his old associates, among whom he was honored, admired and loved, should establish a suitable monument to his memory.

THOSE LITTLE SILVES.

The kidneys, separate from the blood, as it passes through them, impurities for which the final medium of liberation from the system is the bladder. When their function is suspended direful results ensue. Among these are dropsy, Bright's disease, diabetes and maladies which terminate in some one of these. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters stimulates the kidneys, not as an unmedicated alcoholic stimulant would by exciting renewed action and perpetuating their activity and vigor. Thus the blood is once more insured purification and the organs themselves saved from destruction. Malaria, constipation, liver complaint, nervousness, dyspepsia and rheumatism are all thoroughly remedied by the Bitters, which is, moreover, a most thorough appetizer, general tonic and sleep promoter. Use it regularly, not semi-occasionally.

Over fifty demijohns of it went out yesterday—but customers went with them."
