

THE RIVER STATIONARY

by that gold-trust-Populist-combine.

All the Astoria delegates to the grand lodge of Oregon A. O. U. W. are here in force, and, if rumor speaks truly, are making their influence felt considerably in a very effective canvass for the election of one of their number to a position among the grand officers for the coming term. The judgment of the supreme grand lodge in ordering the re-appointment into the order of I. L. Osgood, of Astoria, was formally received by the Oregon grand lodge this afternoon, and accepted as the final verdict in this long-drawn-out and interesting case. Messrs. Dealey, Stockton, Winton, W. B. Ross and Dr. Tuttle are the delegates from down the river. They expect to leave for home on Saturday.

Mr. Duffy, of The Astorian staff, came up the river this morning, for the purpose of taking a trip to Bonneville, on the Columbia, with the steamer Potter, carrying a large party of supreme lodge A. O. U. W. officers, including two intimate friends of his, Charles F. Wencker, secretary of the Republican club of St. Louis, and Dr. D. H. Shields, of Hannibal, Mo., supreme G. M. W., and brother of the assistant United States attorney general under President Harrison.

Mr. Frank V. Holman, the well known attorney and capitalist of this city, is very emphatic in his statements concerning the causes and probable results of the flood, and draws some deductions that, though to his mind not at all warranted by the circumstances, will nevertheless open up paths for reflection and study. He said to me today: "The present high water has most certainly never before occurred within the age of any fir tree in the flooded district, a period which I should estimate roughly at 500 years. The combination of circumstances that brought this state of affairs about has been so unprecedented and uncommon that it is folly to dream of a flood of any like dimensions happening for hundreds of years to come. In the first place the snow did not melt last summer like it usually does, and the Columbia river, which rarely rises till the beginning of June, came up in May—in fact, ahead of the Snake river, which is an altogether unheard of circumstance. The snow that had been accumulated in the Willamette valley caused, of itself, a wholly unexpected rise of ten feet. The reason for the presence of so much snow in the valley was that last year the Willamette experienced five distinct freshets. Here, then, we have all the main points, coming together in combination that went to make up the flood we are just passing through. First and foremost, in my opinion, will not be abandoned, either gradually or at all, for the prospects of a flood of like nature are as far remote as a repetition of the great earthquakes of Lisbon or Charleston. Besides, let us suppose that this flood came once in every ten or fifteen years, and that it entailed a certain amount of loss at every recurrence. I believe that the wholesalers, instead of moving away out of its reach back west of Sixth and south of Alder street, and thereby incurring enormous additional expenditure for hauling goods to and from docks and train depots, would rather bear the losses caused by the flood at the end of every 15 years, which losses would not amount to as much as one year's increased cost of haulage caused by the removal. Of course, I agree with you that it is folly to state that the damage caused by this present flood has been of no account. I confess that it has been considerable, but believe it is overestimated. My figure, at a rough guess, as to the probable loss entailed would be half a million dollars. I do not consider that there is much danger of any trouble with the foundations of buildings. It must be remembered that the water did not press from all four sides onto the basements of these warehouses and stores, but that the interiors were all filled with water too, thus causing an equal distribution of weight and considerably relieving the strain, and bringing to a minimum the chances of any collapse. It seems to me that a great deal of damage has been done to the wharves through the flood, and that their condition is extremely bad."

Mr. Holman's views are open to much criticism, and I will give you tomorrow an interview with a prominent Portland merchant whose interests are bound up in water front property here, but who nevertheless takes issue with Mr. Holman in all his more important theories, and who confesses the indisputable fact that the Front, First and Second street property in this city has been decreasing in value by great jumps, until today it is practically a millstone round the necks of the men who own it.

It may be stated that every figure quoted as the amount of loss in all the street descriptions that have appeared in these articles, has been furnished direct to your correspondent by the proprietors of the various establishments, and that none are the result of wild guesswork.

Manager O'Shea, of the Union Meat Company, on Third street, told me today that he could not compute his losses till tomorrow. They will run well into the thousands.

THESE LITTLE SIVES.

The kidneys, separate from the blood, as it passes through them, impurities for which the final medium of liberation from the system is the bladder. When their function is suspended direful results ensue. Among these are dropsy, Bright's disease, diabetes and maladies which terminate in some one of these. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters stimulates the kidneys, not as an unmediated alcoholic stimulant would by exciting them, but by gently impelling them to renewed action and perpetuating their activity and vigor. Thus the blood is once more insured purification and the organs themselves saved from destruction. Malaria, constipation, liver complaint, nervousness, dyspepsia and rheumatism are all thoroughly remedied by the Bitters, which is, moreover, a most thorough appetizer, general tonic and sleep promoter. Use it regularly, not semi-occasionally.

The business man who says that advertising does not pay does not advertise. He is the one that always doubts the prosperous trade reports he hears of his competitor, who does advertise. He sits in the back of his store, smokes his pipe and wonders why he isn't making any money. He has the blues when he should have trade. He not only lets his neighbor get that neighbor's share of the business, but a good part of his also. He sees people whom he thought old friends of his go into his competitor's store and come out with bundles of goods, when he has the same articles on his shelves, and perhaps at lower prices than they paid his competitor for them. Why is this so? It is because his competitor lets the public know in an intelligent way through the local papers what he has to sell and when he has it. The successful advertiser looks after his advertising space as he does his clerks. He changes his ads. in such a way the people are attracted by them. He feels that to make money he must be willing to spend some; that there is strong competition in all lines of business, and to get his share of the trade he must advertise, and to do it in the most skillful and intelligent way. If he cannot write advertising matter himself, he seeks the aid of some one who has made the writing of advertisements a study—some specialist, who will see that it is properly written in a catchy and displayed way—some one whose duty it is to take off the shoulders of a busy man all the worry of making up an ad. No business man attempts to cure his own sickness, pull his own teeth, make his own clothes or attend to his own law cases. He employs specialists for each of these various services, and saves money by doing it. It is through its language and arrangement that an advertisement gets its business-bringing qualities. There must be something to attract public attention and hold it; something of interest, something out of the ordinary, something that is different from others of the same line of business. To give it these peculiar features requires experience, and the owner of The Astorian has engaged the services of such a specialist for the benefit of its advertising customers who may wish to take advantage of his services. The Evening Star, of Washington, D. C., has an advertisement writer connected with its business department, and its terms to advertisers are, "So much blank space, so much money. The same amount of space, with the assistance of the advertisement writer in getting up ad. attractively, so much additional."

The Astorian charges nothing extra, the services of the expert being thrown in.
