No one has worked harder or is working harder today for the success of Astoria's regatta than Mr. E. A. Seeley, of the steamer Telephone company.

FROM ABOUT THE CITY.

Interviews With Prominent Men on Interesting Subjects.

"Yes, sir," said T. K. Robertson, one of the proprietors of the big cradle now being built at Alderbrook, in answer to a question by an Astorian reporter.

"But it has stirred up the big San Francisco lumber companies owning mills at Gray's Harbor, Willapa, and Puget Sound points, and they are all right after our scalps.

"Well, that reminds me," answered Mr. Robertson, kicking viciously at a block of wood, indicating a vigorous temper.

"The Monterey sailed from the navy yard at 11 this morning; will try her new rudder in San Pablo Bay, then go north."

"Of course this was cheering news to everybody, and arrangements were at once made for the reception of the Monitor and her crew."

"Mr. Stutz, having offered his band for the entertainment of the visitors to the regatta, it has been decided to give them a berth on one of the steamers that will lay at anchor in the stream."

"The Fort Canby Life Saving Crew have made entries for six events."

"Martin Olsen will commence selling pools on the races at the Real Estate Exchange rooms on Thursday next."

"M. J. Kinney will enter his boats today."

"Everyone should start in today and decorate their buildings, not a little, but all over. Paint the town red, white and blue, and then get ready to receive the visitors."

"This is the last day of entry. Every one should get their boats in and registered."
