All hands point to Marshall's twine when the question is asked "What is best for fishermen to buy?"

The first of the tom-cod anglers were out yesterday. They were like a straw hat in January—a little previous.

The steamer R. P. Elmore left for Tillamook at an early hour this morning. She carries considerable freight.

A tidal wave of prosperity struck all the fishermen this season who used Marshall's twine for making their nets.

Fishermen of wisdom are quick to take advantage of past experience, and for that reason they are laying in a good supply of Marshall's twine for the making of their next year's nets.

Kleking, fuming, raging, and discontent won't do any good for those that did not use Marshall's twine last season in making their nets, but trouble can be obviated next year by using no other.

One can hardly get around in Martin Olson's auction rooms on account of the large stock of clothing, heavy underwear, boots, shoes and other furnishing goods that are to be auctioned off.

The steamer South Coast arrived in from San Francisco yesterday morning and unloaded considerable freight at the Astoria Shipping Company's dock. She left up the river about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

A happy fisherman was he who used Marshall's twine in making his nets last season, as he finds today his bank account larger and his net in better condition than if he had used twine of other makes.

For the benefit of those wishing to attend the firemen's tournament at Oregon City the steamer Telephone will sell on Sunday next tickets to Portland and return for $1.50 round trip. These tickets are good until Sept. 7.

The two big ships anchored near the sands opposite the city, loomed up through the smoke yesterday like phantom ships. The sound of hammers knocking the barnacles and rust from their huge sides dispelled the illusion, however.

Twenty-five or thirty people went in bathing at the foot of Tenth street yesterday morning at high tide, and they attracted a good-sized audience, who watched them diving off the piling and sporting about in the water. Some of the bathers were thoughtful enough to nail some pieces of wood on one of the piers, making a convenient place to crawl from the water to the dock.

The Society Minerva held their meeting last night and had a very enthusiastic entertainment. The program was very good and was well appreciated. The subject, "Resolved, That Astoria, with its geographical advantages and natural resources has a great future in store," was discussed pro and con with the result that the house decided in favor of the affirmative.

Last evening the fire in the woods back of the southeastern portion of the city was still burning, and quite a number of residences in that part of the town will be in a dangerous position should the wind change and the fire get under much headway. Tuesday night several parties had hard work to keep the fire away from the residence of Harry Cribb, and it was only with a united effort that the property was saved.

The Portland District of the Columbia conference will hold its mission meeting here in Astoria this week, in the Swedish Lutheran church, beginning Thursday evening by the installation of the new pastor, Rev. G. A. Anderson, of Spokane will preach. The meeting continues Friday at 2 p. m., when Rev. Skans, of Portland, and Rev. Mattson, of Tacoma, will preach. The local hose team, which will compete for honors on that occasion are still doing some hard training, and Captain Worsley says that he is confident his men will not lose the enviable reputation that the Astoria hose team have held for a long time.

Word came from Fort Stevens last evening that thirty-five men were working hard battling with the burning timber south of that place, and endeavoring to keep the flames back from the Point Adams light-house. For the past two weeks the forest in that neighborhood has been on fire, and every time a breeze would spring up the flames would start anew, smouldering away as the wind died. Yesterday a gentle wind sprang up from the northeast, and it was strong enough to drive the flames through the dry forest directly toward the Point Adams light. The men are working hard to fight it back, but if the wind should happen to blow up pretty strong from the same direction that it was blowing yesterday, the old light-house would be in danger of going with the rest of the inflammable stuff.

Deputy United States Marshal H. A. Smith is making it tropical for parties who have been guilty of filing on lands without first going upon the property. Yesterday he made another arrest of one of the notorious Wood's pupils, one August Johnson, who is charged with perjury in a land case, having filed on the southeast corner of section 7 township 4 north, range 2 west, without first going upon the land. He was taken to Portland last night by Deputy Smith, and will have a hearing along with the other land-swindling frauds. Mr. Smith states that he has information that will lead to the arrest of other parties who have made fraudulent entries on land in Clatsop county, and he will not rest until he has them behind the bars.

On the same day, in all probability, the sweepstake fishing boat race will occur. ON THE SAFE SIDE. Everybody knows this is a good place to be, but everybody does not take measures to be there. They should be checked at the outset with Bitters, which will prevent their progress by arousing the renal organs to activity, and thus place those who resort to this saving medicine on the safe side. This preservative of safety also conquers constipation, liver complaint, malarial fever, nervousness and dyspepsia.

Blue Devils

The business man who says that advertising does not pay does not advertise. He is the one that always doubts the prosperous trade reports he hears of his competitor, who does advertise. He sits in the back of his store, smokes his pipe and wonders why he isn't making any money. He has the blues when he should have trade. He not only lets his neighbor get that neighbor's share of the business, but a good part of his also. He sees people whom he thought old friends of his go into his competitor's store and come out with bundles of goods, when he has the same articles on his shelves, and perhaps at lower prices than they paid his competitor for them. Why is this so? It is because his competitor lets the public know in an intelligent way through the local papers what he has to sell and when he has it.

The successful advertiser looks after his advertising space as he does his clerks. He changes his ads. in such a way the people are attracted by them. He feels that to make money he must be willing to spend some; that there is strong competition in all lines of business, and to get his share of the trade he must advertise, and to do it in the most skillful and intelligent way. If he cannot write advertising matter himself, he seeks the aid of some one who has made the writing of advertisements a study—some specialist, who will see that it is properly written in a catchy and displayed way—some one whose duty it is to take off the shoulders of a busy man all the worry of making up an ad. No business man attempts to cure his own sickness, pull his own teeth, make his own clothes or attend to his own law cases. He employs specialists for each of these various services, and saves money by doing it. It is through its language and arrangement that an advertisement gets its business-bringing qualities. There must be something to attract public attention and hold it; something of interest, something out of the ordinary, something that is different from others of the same line of business. To give it these peculiar features requires experience, and the owner of The Astorian has engaged the services of such a specialist for the benefit of its advertising customers who may wish to take advantage of his services.

The Evening Star, of Washington, D. C., has an advertisement writer connected with its business department, and its terms to advertisers are, "So much blank space, so much money. The same amount of space, with the assistance of the advertisement writer in getting up ad. attractively, so much additional." The Astorian charges nothing extra, the services of the expert being thrown in.
