Of ready-made trousers will answer if you can stand in a barrel all day. They're hardly safe to wear about the streets.

Some kinds of ready-made clothing look very well behind plate glass windows, when all pressed up, embellished with bright satens and millinery bouquets. It never looks as well elsewhere.

The prices on such goods will positively surprise you. It may even sometimes occur that you'll wonder how they are sold so cheap. You'll wonder less if you ever try them. Experience is a powerful teacher. Better profit by the other fellows' whenever you can.

We're the apostles of good "honor bright" clothing, preaching it all the time, and practicing what we preach.

Great preparations for a coming cold winter seem to be in progress at the store of Foard & Stokes Co. Two mammoth heating stoves are being put up to battle with Jack Frost. The stoves are so large that even without fire, the sight of them is enough to make one feel comfortable and warm.

The British bark Silverbow, 1177 tons, Captain Douglas, arrived in yesterday afternoon, 50 days from Kuchinatzu, Japan, with 1750 tons of coal. Captain Douglas reports a pleasant voyage until he arrived off the river, when he encountered dirty weather and strong southeast gales. But one vessel was sighted during the trip, and that was a Pacific Mail steamer. The Silverbow arrived off the river on Monday last, and took a pilot aboard Wednesday evening.

J. S. and W. C. Garner, of the Northwestern Lumber Company, of Portland, were in the city last evening, on their way home from Seaside where they have been for the past two days. At the latter place they contracted with Mr. H. F. L. Logan for 800,000 feet of spruce lumber which is to be furnished as fast as the mill can turn it out. Mr. Logan has now got his mill in first-class condition, and has facilities for getting logs to the mill via the Necanicum from one of the finest spruce timber belts on the coast.

R. T. French and his company, which appears here next Wednesday evening in the great comedy drama entitled "The Phoenix." Of this play the Oregonian of October 17th, 1893, says: "The Phoenix" was produced at French's Park Theatre last night, and scored an immense success, "standing room only" being displayed before the theatre at an early hour. The play is a most interesting one. Its climaxes are excellently planned, and the uniform good acting of Mr. French's company, combined with the good material they have to work on, make the production enjoyable in every way. The scenery of the play is in every respect admirable. An indication of the impression Mr. French's company makes may be gathered from the fact that a party of tourists who attended the theatre Friday night were so pleased with the performance that they last evening presented the company with a magnificent floral piece, consisting of a cross, star and crescent, standing seven feet high, which was the sensation of the hour as it stood in the lobby.

The new time-lock safe, received several days ago by the First National Bank, has attracted a great many spectators. It sets in the front of the bank, and the officials take great pleasure in explaining to the visitors the intricacies of its lock and peculiar door. It is known as the Mosler Screw door, and this feature is perhaps as interesting as the triple time lock that fastens it when closed. The door turns with a lever, and is screwed into the aperture of the safe on the same principle as that used on the breech of the modern Krupp gun. Once in the safe is air tight, so airtight and with such precision are the threads made. The time lock is of the triple pattern, any one of the three being called into use if the other becomes out of repair. They can be wound up to run seventy hours, and when once the safe is closed it is impossible for it to be opened until the time set on the lock. For day use a separate combination lock is utilized. The safe is made of case hardened steel, proof against the hardest drills made.

THE CHURCH AND LABOR.

Mr. A. E. Fletcher, editor of the London Daily Chronicle, delivered an interesting address at the re-union conference at Grindelwald, Eng., on the subject, "The church and its relation to labor." While his ideas advanced apply directly to the social conditions of England, yet the general spirit of them will apply with equal force in this country.

He considers the present labor movement to be, not an independent movement, but rather a part of the transition from individualism to altruism, or, in other words, from selfishness to brotherliness, which has been the marked feature of recent ethical and political movements.

Although it would seem to us he is mistaken when it comes to practical application, yet he maintains that the struggle is not merely a question of wages, but an effort on the part of the masses to improve their material condition so as to remove obstacles in the way of moral progress.

In regard to the "Political Economy of the Gospel," he says: "You ask me to define a living wage. I frankly tell you I cannot. The living wage to me is a living principle, which is—that wages shall govern contracts, and not contracts wages, that the capitalists shall not be allowed to enter into out-throat competition with the assumption that they can recoup themselves from loss by taking it out of wages."

"We are told that this principle is contrary to political economy. It is not contrary to the political economy of the New Testament, which is quite good enough for me, and I am prepared to say quite good enough for the greatest and most scientific of political economists, John Ruskin."

The unemployed he divided into two classes—the wealthy, or those engaged in non-producing employments, who, he says, are paid in idleness; and the poor, who are forced into idleness. In regard to the former class, the statistics show that England pays annually about $40,000,000 for keeping people in idleness.

It is useless for the unemployed to direct their attention to agriculture, as agriculture is depressed owing to a reversal of the land policy of Jesus: Jesus said: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;" but in England we say, "Blessed are the proud, for they shall inherit the earth." Mr. Fletcher suggests that the 50,000,000 acres of waste land could be utilized in growing timber, whereby England could produce all the timber she now imports at a cost of $30,000,000 per year, and in so doing give employment to 70,000 men for forty years.

Concerning the duty of the church, he says: "Why should not the church insist upon the importance of the government taking up some such scheme as the above?"

Why should not the church start an experiment in farming? Even if it cost money it is better than chucking it away in dotes. The churches have an immense power of raising money. If some of the large sums raised by the churches from motives of great benevolence were devoted to experimental agriculture, it would do much to solve the question of the unemployed."

We in America would not think of the church experimenting in agriculture, yet this suggestion concerning the use of waste lands in England may lead us to consider the same question on this side of the Atlantic.

Oregon's Great Seaport.

The prediction of shrewd old John Jacob Astor is about to be fulfilled. The city of Astoria, Oregon, is about to become the greatest seaport and metropolis of Northwestern America.

Its location and resources have attracted the attention of capital, and it is today the best field for the investment of money, brains and muscle on the American continent.

This "Largest civilized city in the world without a railroad," is to experience the impetus of a connection in different directions with two of the greatest continental railway systems.

Astoria's harbor advantages (the best on the whole Pacific Coast) are now understood and appreciated; its fishing interests (already paying to the hands employed in the salmon canneries alone over $250,000 of wages each month) are to be augmented by the investment of outside capital and the erection of large and latest improved plants. The immense forests of Oregon pine surrounding the city are to be converted into lumber for the Australian, Chinese, Japanese, and South American markets.

The great coal fields within a few miles of the city are to be immediately opened, and the product thereof shipped in every direction.

A dairying region unsurpassed in the whole world is to be opened up and afforded an outlet to market.

A harbor, better than that of San Francisco, and the only one with this exception on the more than two thousand miles of Pacific coast, is to be supplied with increased dockage and coaling facilities, and immense grain elevators will be built to store and load the wheat of the Columbia basin directly on the merchant fleets of the world.

Astoria offers openings for many new industries, namely, grist mills, saw mills, paper mills, stove, box, barrel and tub factories, show case works, cash and door factories.

There will be room for many live, energetic and wide-awake men and women with or without money. All inquiries promptly answered. Papers and data supplied on application.

Address ASTORIAN'S INFORMATION BUREAU. Astoria, Oregon.
