

A STRANGER'S VIEWS.

The travelling correspondent of the West Coast Trade, who was here last week, sends the following to his paper:

Thursday I took the steamer Ilwaco for Astoria, by a zig-zag course through the many fish-traps which number something like 500 in this vicinity. We finally reached the main channel of the Columbia river, which brought us into view of the government jetties being built for the purpose of deepening the channel and bar at the mouth of the river. The piling has been driven and a double railroad track has been built at the top. Train loads of rock are being hauled and dumped around the piling, which makes a permanent brakewater and throws the water into a narrow space, which, it is expected, will eventually cut the bar sufficiently to allow vessels to come in at low tide without trouble. At 4:30 the steamer landed, and I was soon at home at the fine Occident hotel, where the travelling public is well received and everything done for their comfort.

Astoria is certainly a fish town, as there are thirteen canneries here, and twenty-two tributary to it. There are two saw mills, two box factories, barrel and tub factory, and other smaller industries. The town claims a population of about 9,000, which is probably increased in the fishing season by 2000 more, and as I sat in the office of a prominent packer and saw the fishermen come in and get all the way from $50 to $175 in gold for their week's catch of fish, at 1-3-4 cents per pound, I thought what would be the matter with fishing in the spring and summer when there are more fish, and the price is 5 cents per pound. Nothing but the lateness of the season stopped me from turning fisherman, as I was pronounced an artist at the business at Ilwaco. The spring and summer catch of salmon amounted to 452,900 cases, and the fall catch, which will close November 1st, will swell the whole pack up to 490,000 cases of salmon for the Columbia river. Astoria is one of the solid towns of Oregon, and has lots of wealth to back up her industries, and when she gets a railroad, will no doubt give Portland a hard race for the wheat shipments of the Columbia river. It is a well laid out town, and the stores are well equipped and look thrifty.

THE SHIP MINDORO.

The Essex County Mercury, published at Salem, Mass., recently contained the following poem by Fred Goldsmith Walker, the subject being one of the old Salem ships, that in her day, had a fame that extended to the farthest seas:

Stately ship! Oh, fair Mindoro! When I ever look on thee, There comes back a past history, From beyond Time's distant sea.

And it seems that on our harbor, Sheltered from the outer bay, I can see the ships of Salem, Which have now all sailed away.

Gone their way from scenes endearing, And the port they know so well, Some in coral groves are rolling, With the ceaseless underseal.

So whenever I gaze upon thee, Proud Mindoro, queen of grace, It doth seem a slight resemblance, Of this old-time shipping place.

True, I hear no creaking windlass, Nor the sailor lads at play, And no chime of some sweetness Is re-echoed o'er the bay.

But in thee I see a veteran, Who has battled with the deep; May'st thou live, O ship, forever! And thy lines of beauty keep!

For thy work is far from over, Keeping free from shoals and bars, Vindicate old Salem's prestige! Float once more the Stripes and Stars.
