A LOCOMOTIVE

Train is but a means to an end in order to make its presence known. It is more a means of convenience for us in keeping in touch with one another, a handy and speedy means of getting from one place to another. It is not for us to pet or pamper, but to use it for what it is meant for.

THE STATION FAULT.

Stationmaster of the Oregon and California Railroad today, after remaining afloat at Portland.

The stationmaster left on Tuesday afternoon, after taking care of the usual routine of leaving the usual stack of newspapers for the train to be handled by the station agent on arrival. That afternoon, with the usual stack of newspapers, the stationmaster left for Portland.

The stationmaster has been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad for many years, and is well known to the public.

E. M. McDonald, by Commercial Street.

TODAY'S WEATHER.

Late call in the local, Washington, Monday, brought in the following:

"Anchorage" The weather today was fine, with a little wind and a little snow. The temperature was about 30 degrees. The forecast for tomorrow is for more snow, with a little wind and a little cold.

FRONT PAGE.

Several items of interest from the local, Portland, Oregon, are:

1. The stationmaster of the Oregon and California Railroad today, after remaining afloat at Portland.

2. The stationmaster has been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad for many years, and is well known to the public.

3. The weather today was fine, with a little wind and a little snow. The temperature was about 30 degrees. The forecast for tomorrow is for more snow, with a little wind and a little cold.

4. The stationmaster left on Tuesday afternoon, after taking care of the usual routine of leaving the usual stack of newspapers for the train to be handled by the station agent on arrival. That afternoon, with the usual stack of newspapers, the stationmaster left for Portland.

5. The stationmaster's departure caused a good deal of interest, and many people came to the station to bid him farewell. The stationmaster expressed the hope that he would be back soon, and that he would bring them a story of his adventures on the high seas.

FRONT PAGE.

Several items of interest from the local, Portland, Oregon, are:

1. The stationmaster of the Oregon and California Railroad today, after remaining afloat at Portland.

2. The stationmaster has been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad for many years, and is well known to the public.

3. The weather today was fine, with a little wind and a little snow. The temperature was about 30 degrees. The forecast for tomorrow is for more snow, with a little wind and a little cold.

4. The stationmaster left on Tuesday afternoon, after taking care of the usual routine of leaving the usual stack of newspapers for the train to be handled by the station agent on arrival. That afternoon, with the usual stack of newspapers, the stationmaster left for Portland.

5. The stationmaster's departure caused a good deal of interest, and many people came to the station to bid him farewell. The stationmaster expressed the hope that he would be back soon, and that he would bring them a story of his adventures on the high seas.

FRONT PAGE.

Several items of interest from the local, Portland, Oregon, are:

1. The stationmaster of the Oregon and California Railroad today, after remaining afloat at Portland.

2. The stationmaster has been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad for many years, and is well known to the public.

3. The weather today was fine, with a little wind and a little snow. The temperature was about 30 degrees. The forecast for tomorrow is for more snow, with a little wind and a little cold.

4. The stationmaster left on Tuesday afternoon, after taking care of the usual routine of leaving the usual stack of newspapers for the train to be handled by the station agent on arrival. That afternoon, with the usual stack of newspapers, the stationmaster left for Portland.

5. The stationmaster's departure caused a good deal of interest, and many people came to the station to bid him farewell. The stationmaster expressed the hope that he would be back soon, and that he would bring them a story of his adventures on the high seas.

FRONT PAGE.

Several items of interest from the local, Portland, Oregon, are:

1. The stationmaster of the Oregon and California Railroad today, after remaining afloat at Portland.

2. The stationmaster has been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad for many years, and is well known to the public.

3. The weather today was fine, with a little wind and a little snow. The temperature was about 30 degrees. The forecast for tomorrow is for more snow, with a little wind and a little cold.

4. The stationmaster left on Tuesday afternoon, after taking care of the usual routine of leaving the usual stack of newspapers for the train to be handled by the station agent on arrival. That afternoon, with the usual stack of newspapers, the stationmaster left for Portland.

5. The stationmaster's departure caused a good deal of interest, and many people came to the station to bid him farewell. The stationmaster expressed the hope that he would be back soon, and that he would bring them a story of his adventures on the high seas.