The Astorian guarantees to its subscribers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

Advertising rates can be obtained on application to the business manager.

This paper is in possession of all the telegraph franchises, and is the only paper on the Columbia river that publishes genuine dispatches.

The Daily Astorian's circulation is five times as great as that of the combined circulation of the other daily papers of Astoria.

The Weekly Astorian, the third oldest weekly in the state of Oregon, has, next to the Portland Oregonian, the largest weekly circulation in the state.

Subscribers to the Astorian are requested to notify this office, without loss of time, immediately they fail to receive their daily paper, or when they do not get it at the usual hour. By doing this they will enable the management to place the blame on the proper parties and to insure a speedy remedy.

Handley & Haas are our Portland agents and copies of the Astorian can be had every morning at their stand on First street.

A GREAT VICTORY.

The later and more reliable reports from the election come in from all quarters, and it is amazing to see how fairly they are being received. It may be fairly doubted if any Republican leader in the country, no matter how sanguine or well-informed on the subject, would have dared to indulge the secret hope, much less hazard the public prophesy at that time of a victory so far-reaching and astounding in all its consequences.

Perhaps never before in the political history of popular government has there been such a revulsion of sentiment against a party as is shown by the variance in the vote cast but two years ago for the present Democratic congress, and that by which the people have called another to succeed it.

Not alone in the old-time Republican sections of the country have sensible men by the thousand resumed their allegiance to the great party of progress and prosperity, but some of the most stubborn citadels and strongholds of the party of destruction and despair have been invaded and carried by larger Republican majorities than they were ever known to give their most cherished defenders.

If the Republicans have experienced their Austerlitz in the past, the Democrats have certainly now met their Waterloo, and it is improbable that they will have even a rallying chance for many years to come.

The house is safely Republican by more than fifty majority, while enough state legislatures have been carried or are in such serious doubt as to justify the prediction that the same party will also organize the next senate. With both branches of congress Republican, it is but a step to the presidency and the ultimate control of all branches of the government.

Then, indeed, may be expected a revival of business, and the re-establishment of our national prestige both at home and abroad.

The boy emperor of China, after slapping the face of his mistress and causing her to commit suicide, for the shame and humiliation of it, has, it is reported, decided to take the conduct of the war into his own hands and "exterminate Japan."

But the Japs are not poor little Manchu princes to be exterminated by a slap.

The Chinese representative at Brussels is said to have purchased in Liege 20,000 cartridges and a million rifles. This is a good many rifles for so few cartridges, but as the Chinese have a fashion of throwing away their rifles when they begin to sprint, the purchase is probably allowing a good margin for wastage. Of course, there is the probability that the entire consignment may fall into the hands of the Japanese cruisers.

That malignant crank who disgraces Illinois by being the governor of the state, forces himself upon the country's attention again, by a complaint, the substantial part of which is that the hoodlums who gathered around the Pullman strikers, and were guilty of arson, murder and robbery, were unable to have their own way, owing to the interposition of the power of the United States—the mayor of the city and the governor of the state having manifested incompetency, untrustworthiness, not to say sympathy with the strikers. As neither the strikers, the city or the state could or would preserve order, the United States appeared and restored it.

According to D. P. Armour the attitude recently assumed by certain German cities regarding the importation of live American cattle and fresh beef is not a very serious matter. He places the number of cattle imported during 1893 at 4,000 head, and he does not think that total has been reached during the current year. Anyway, our German friends are unnecessarily alarmed regarding the danger of disease being communicated from our live cattle and beef, and in time will be convinced of their error. Meantime American shippers have had an object lesson as to the necessity of exercising the utmost care in their consignments for the foreign market, for otherwise a trade which is susceptible of great development may be ruined.

The attention of William of Germany is respectfully drawn to the following sententious observation of Thackeray, who apparently had in his mind's eye the present leader of the European concert. "When a king writes verses we may be sure there will be plenty of people to admire his poetry." But Thackeray never dreamed that a king would add to the vice of versifying the atrocity of musical composition.
