Oregon's Great Seaport.

The prediction of shrewd old John Jacob Astor is about to be fulfilled. The city of Astoria, Oregon, is about to become the greatest seaport and metropolis of Northwestern America.

Its location and resources have attracted the attention of capital, and it is today the best field for the lovestment of money, brains and muscle on the American continent. This "Largest civilized city in the world without a railroad," is to exper-fence the impetus of a connection in different directions with two of the greatest continental railway systems. Astoria's harbor advantages (the best on the whole Pacific Coast) are now understood and appreciated; its fishing interests (already paying to the hands employed in the salmon canneries alone over $250,000 of wages each month) are to be augmented by the investment of outside capital and the erection of large and latest improved plants. The Immense forests of Oregon plue surrounding the city are to be converted into lumber for the Australlan, Chinese, Japanese, and South American markets. The great coal fields within a few miles of the city are to be immediately opened, and the product thereof shipped in every direction.

A dairying region unsurpassed in the whole world is to be opened up and afforded an outlet to market.

A harbor, better than that of San Francisco, and the only one with this exception on the more than two thousand miles of Pacific coast, is to be supplied with increased dockage and coaling facilities, and immense grain elevators will be built to store and load the wheat of the Columbia basin directly on the merchant fleets of the world.

Astoria offers openings for many new industries, namely, grist mills, saw mills, paper mills, stave, box, barrel and tub factories, show case works, sash and door factories.

There will be room for many live, energetic and wide-awake men and women with or without money. All inquiries promptly answered. Papers and data supplied on application.
