It may have some facts that appeal to humanity than the periodical campaign of the Turk against his helpless victim. And who is the Turk? Who but that interloper in Europe who has perpetimed exactly the same sort of barbaritles ever since he obtained a footing there! All Europe was aroused against him on that ground centuries ago. Within the memory of men of middle age he repeated them in Bulgaria. His appetite must now be fed on victims who have not the immediate protection of European Powers.

But who keeps the Turk in a position where he can commit these awful deeds? Who but the fealous nations that fear to just him lest one or the other of them should get an undue ad-
